

House restricts outside income

Washington (UPI) — The House Wednesday approved sweeping ethics reforms that will require members to disclose all financial interests annually, end "slush funds" and limit certain outside earnings.

The provisions were part of a comprehensive new code of ethics that Speaker Thomas O'Neill said "America demands."

The vote was 402 to 22. Because it deals only with the House — the Senate has its own ethics bill coming to the floor next week — the measure does not require approval from the other body.

Parts of the reform package drew heavy opposition from both parties, particularly the plan to limit "outside earned income" to 15% of the official $57,500 salary, or $8,625 a year, after the start of 1979.

But it was adopted overwhelmingly after O'Neill, in arguing for passage of all the standards of conduct recommended by a special reform panel, said the income restriction proposal is "the heart and soul of this package."

Final action came after more than eight hours of debate in which Republicans and Democrats opposed to the income limitation called it unfair, unnecessary and unconstitutional. Defenders said it was vital to deal with potential conflicts of interest.

The key vote came on the proposed income limit. A move to kill it was defeated 344 to 79.

Earlier, by a vote of 235 to 187, the House rejected a Republican-backed effort to strike down the ban on privately funded unofficial office accounts, known as "slush funds" in return for a $5,000 increase in the current $2,000 taxpayer-funded allowance given members for official expenses.

The debate began with Republicans booing and complaining when Democrats put through a rule restricting amendments to the proposed code on a vote of 267 to 153 that cleared the way for approval of the full package.

No restrictions would be imposed on "unearned income" from investments, such as stocks or bonds and most family-owned farms or businesses.

Outside income for congressmen is unrestricted under existing rules except for a $25,000 annual ceiling on honoraria or fees received for making speeches, writing articles and the like.

Facing little or no resistance were other key provisions which would:

— Require congressmen to disclose all sources and amounts of income annually.

— Forbid members to accept any gifts worth more than $100 from lobbyists.

— Prohibit use of official funds to pay for foreign travel by retiring or defeated members after a general election.

— Restrict use of congressmen's franking privilege for mass mailings at government expense.

Under the rule adopted by the House at the urging of Democratic leaders, members were allowed to vote only "up or down" on each of the code's six basic sections and to offer only one major amendment — to substitute a flat $15,000 ceiling for the 15% limit on outside earnings.

Farmers welcome moisture

Welcome moisture in the form of snow, rain, sleet and drizzle soaked into dry Nebraska soil Wednesday.

Snowfall was heaviest in the northeast part of the state with six inches reported in the Hartington, Wayne and Osmond areas.

Snow depths elsewhere included Valentine and Norfolk four inches, Imperial and Sidney three, Mullen two and Scottsbluff one.

Lincoln's precipitation started early Wednesday as sleet, later turning to rain showers and drizzle. By evening Lincoln had received .47 of an inch of moisture.

Norfolk and Omaha both reported .43 of an inch of precipitation while Valentine had .25, Scottsbluff .11, Grand Island .08 and Chadron .01.

Northerly winds were gusting up to 35 miles per hour in western Nebraska Wednesday night, causing drifting and blowing snow and reducing visibility to zero in the Sidney and Imperial areas.

Agriculturalists said the snow and rain should benefit the state's winter wheat fields, which have been suffering from prolonged drought conditions. However, considerably more moisture will be needed to assure a crop, observers said.

The low pressure center bringing the precipitation to Nebraska was located in northeast Kansas Wednesday night, moving slowly eastward.

Snow was expected to continue in the west and north portions of the state Thursday with the east receiving snow showers.

Two girls die in crash near Dwight

Dwight (UPI) — Two young girls were killed and their parents injured Thursday in the collision of their car and a milk truck two miles west of Dwight at a Butler County road.

Killed were Janae Terrel, 1, and her sister, Autumn, 2. Billy Terrel, 21, Dwight, was in satisfactory condition at a hospital in Seward and his wife, Sheila, 19, was in critical condition in a Lincoln hospital. Authorities said a southbound truck driven by Jerry Lee Galloway, 34, Firth, collided with the westbound car, and both vehicles overturned.

Excitement is excitement. And mothers of athletes competing in the girls' basketball tournament starting here Thursday have their share.

"I think it's great," said Mrs. Helen Mulligan, mother of Lincoln Pius-X's premier player, Mary Mulligan. "We're excited about it."

Mrs. Mulligan said her family has been strong supporters of her daughter's basketball activities since they began two years ago.

"We've gone to all of the games," she said. "We're cheering for Mary, but we're also happy she's going to state to represent."

She said she's glad to see there's a girls' state tournament because "the girls' games are just as good as the boys'."

Barbara Hart, mother of Barb Hart, an all-state possibility from Lincoln East, juggernaut 17-0 girls A squad, said "everybody's excited about the girls' tournament."

Mrs. Hart is also concerned with keeping sports in its place.

"She should enjoy playing but she should keep things in perspective," she said. "And as parents, we have an obligation to help her keep things in perspective.

"There's more to life than sports," she said.

She said she's just as proud of her daughter's being the children's choir director at Aldersgate United Methodist Church as she is about her playing basketball.

"She got very disappointed about being to choir practice when the basketball tournament came around," she said. "That made me feel very good about her."

And she encourages humility.

"We don't say she's great," she said. "We say East High has a great team and we're happy for them," she said.

But she made in the girls' making the first state tournament in Nebraska since 1944 is still there.

"We're behind her 100%," said Jean Van Dusen, mother of Lincoln High's premier player, Debbie Van Dusen. "The whole family's behind her."

The Van Dusen family is used to top-powered athletics, though, as daughter Debbie has played in national Amateur-Athletic Union (AAU) tournaments before Nebraska had a comparable interscholastic program.

In the rural areas, the festivities have preceded the tournament too.

In Shickley, which sports a 16-0 Class D team, they've painted the downtown business windows, held pep rallies and closed the school during the game day. A couple of businesses are even planning to close so the owners can follow the team.

And the little town of 400 already has sent 200 people from the rural area to see its team play in the district playoffs in Hastings.

Shirley Meyer, mother of Shickley standout June Meyer, said she's excited about her daughter's success, but wants to let her do it on her own.

"I don't think she has the talent and interest to let her do it on her own," she said. "We're encouraging her, but we're not pushing her."

She worries a little about all of the praise. "It's nice to have it but sometimes it can go to your head," she said.

Not only have the girls achieved equality by having a state tournament, but they've achieved equality of interest.

Just like when the boys come to Lincoln to play state championships, the motels and hotels of Lincoln are mostly filled with fans and participants who have come from around Nebraska to watch their favorites.

Right-on-red to be allowed unless marked

Beginning next Monday, Lincoln drivers will be allowed to make right turns, after they stop, at all red stoplights — unless a sign specifically prohibits the turn.

Existing policy permits the turns only when indicated by a sign at the intersection.

Mayor Helen Boosalis said the main reason for the change of policy is to fall in line with a similar change in federal policy.

The city now has about 300 signs scattered around the city authorizing the right turn on red lights. Mrs. Boosalis said crews will begin removing the signs Monday, but it probably will be a couple months before the task is completed.

The city's public works department will be glad to see the signs go, according to the mayor. After high storm winds crews often spent a day straightening the signs, she said.

Mrs. Boosalis said she envisions no change in city policy at the few intersections where a sign authorizes a left turn on red after stopping.

Committee offers own state pay plan

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee Wednesday recommended its own salary plan for state employees, one which offers the highest percentage hikes for lower paid governmental workers.

Adopted on a 5-1 vote, the committee plan would give each state employee a 3% pay boost plus a $240 annual increase for fiscal 1977-78, all effective on July 1.

The $240 increase would come in the form of an extra $20 a month.

Excluded from that formula would be university and state college faculty members and administrators, whose individual salary increases would be determined by the institutions themselves.

But the total increase in the salary budgets for those institutions could not exceed 5 1/2% by the end of the coming fiscal year.

In adopting its own salary plan, the committee set aside Gov. J. James Exon's proposal, but stayed within the fiscal 1977-78 salary costs recommended by the governor.

The committee proposal, however, will reduce salary base costs for fiscal 1978-79 some $3.6 million below Exon's plan, Chairman Jerome Warner of Waverly said.

Exon had proposed a 4% salary boost for all employees on July 1, followed by another 3% hike on each employee's anniversary date of state employment.

While that would only boost fiscal 1977-78 salary costs by 5 1/2%, Warner said, it would increase the salary base for fiscal 1978-79 by 7%.

The committee plan will hike salary costs by 5 1/2% in the coming fiscal year and hold the salary base increase for the following year to the same level, he said.

The committee's $240 plus 3% policy will cost the state an additional $13 million.

By combining a percentage hike with a dollar figure, the salary policy gives a larger overall percentage increase to lower paid state employees. Upper income employees would receive a larger dollar raise, but a smaller overall percentage increase.

The committee policy was proposed by Warner, and then offered to the committee on a motion by Sen. John Savage of Omaha.

Other supporters included Sens. Douglas Bereuter of Uteka, Myron Rumery of North Platte and William Hasebrook of West Point.

Arguing that the plan tends to "level salaries" and thereby discourage initiative, ambition and hard work, Sen. Ron Cope of Kearney voted against the proposal.

Sens. Steve Fowler of Lincoln, Shirley Marsh of Lincoln and Glenn Goodrich of Omaha were absent.

By providing extra consideration for the lower paid workers, Savage said, the Legislature would make it possible for "the little guy to have an extra beer instead of the big guy having an extra Cadillac."

The total overall salary increase for the average worker (who earns about $10,300 a year) would hover at about $550 or 5 1/2%.

That compares to a committee cost of living estimate of 4.8%. The $240 figure is designed to fully recover the cost of living hike for the lowest salaried state workers.

Warner said that economic conditions in the state "dictate an exceedingly conservative approach" to budgeting for the coming fiscal year.

If economic conditions improve and state revenue would permit it, the 1978 Legislature could increase the fiscal 1977-78 salary levels when it meets next January, he said.

Fowler said he would prefer a $240 plus 4% hike now, and he later voted with Goodrich for an alternative plan to provide $300 plus 2 1/2% for all employees and an additional one-half per cent increase in agency salary budgets for merit raises.

That proposal fell on a 2-5 thud. Goodrich later failed to gain any support for a 5% raise, plus a 1% merit fund.

Bereuter first suggested a discretionary fund of one-half per cent, but his motion (including $240 plus 2 1/2% for all employees) was rejected on a 3-5 count.

The salary proposal will affect an estimated 25,000 state employees.

Officer put on probation as 'appropriate action'

High-ranking Nebraska State Patrol officers are subject to discipline just like ordinary troopers and investigators.

That was the message in a ruling by Col. C. P. Karthausser that Capt. Lynn V. Parks, head of the patrol's criminal investigation division, will receive three months' administrative probation for speeding.

In January, drug investigator Carol Fransen received four months' probation for speeding. At a hearing over that disciplinary action, Parks — who was Fransen's supervisor — testified that he too had been stopped for speeding in the past but had never received any disciplinary action.

Fransen resigned after the hearing. State Personnel Director Roy Gardner ruled last week that the probation was not an unjust punishment for a speeding violation.

Karthausser said after the hearing that he was not informed of Parks' speeding violation when it happened but would investigate the incident.

In a statement Wednesday Karthausser said, "I have taken what I consider to be appropriate action, which is that the captain be placed on three months' administrative probation." "I now consider the matter to be closed."

An officer on probation cannot receive a raise or a promotion. He is also subject to dismissal for another serious infraction of patrol policy.

Parks could not be reached Wednesday for comment.

Hold on Eritrea slipping

(c) New York Times

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia — Guerrillas fighting for the independence of the northernmost province of Eritrea reportedly are wearing down the morale of 20,000 Ethiopian troops, whose hold on the hot and rugged territory is apparently slipping.

The rebels, numbering between 10,000 and 15,000 are split into two factions — the Eritrean Liberation Front, a predominantly Moslem group, and the Marxist-oriented Peoples' Liberation Front. The two sides are trying to end their differences, sources say. Should they do so, their ability to harass Ethiopian forces would be greatly enhanced.

Should be easy to find

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — Police are looking for a marked man.

A robber walked into the Blue Nude bookstore, pulled a knife on clerk Ronda Valasek, 21, and told her to give him money.

She said she and the bandit scuffled, she managed to grab a can of white spray paint, and she squirted him in the face and shoulder.

He fled, taking only a key chain wrested from her in the scuffle — and a fresh coat of paint.

Busing 'counterproductive'

Washington (UPI) — Judge Wade McCree Jr., the nominee for solicitor general, called court-ordered busing "counterproductive" Wednesday but said it should still be used to desegregate some schools.

Hiring cut back

Washington (UPI) — President Carter Wednesday ordered an immediate, temporary 25% cutback in new hiring in the executive branch, a move that could reduce the federal payroll by about 7,500 persons this spring.

Washington (AP) — The Senate Wednesday joined President Carter in protesting human rights violations in the Soviet Union.

A resolution adopted by a 92-0 vote cited "the recent beatings, imprisonment, and harassment of Soviet Jews and other minorities trying to obtain emigration visas to reunite with their families."

Draft said needed

Washington (UPI) — The all-volunteer Army is "a sinking ship" full of misfits that needs support from a backup draft and a national service requirement, a report to Congress said Wednesday.

Since the all-volunteer concept replaced the draft, it said, recruiting has fallen off, the quality of recruits has declined and the number of courts-martial has approached record highs.

Social Security hike deflated

Washington (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee yielded Wednesday to Carter administration opposition and decided against raising Social Security payroll taxes this year.

The panel, preparing a report on its taxing and spending plans for 1978, tentatively went on record in favor of a new tax cut of up to $250 a year for parents of college students and for doubling an existing tax credit for parents who have to hire babysitters. The latter credit — which is subtracted directly from taxes owed — would be raised to a maximum of $1,600.

Both proposals are tentative — still subject to new consideration by the committee and by the House and Senate.

But the panel's reversal on the Social Security tax hike, coupled with President Carter's opposition, makes it highly unlikely that payroll taxes will take a bigger bite out of paychecks starting next January, as had been expected.

Sen. Russell B. Long, chairman of the Finance Committee, asked the panel to do an about-face less than 24 hours after it indicated support for the hike. The reason, a lengthy telephone call Wednesday morning from Joseph Califano, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Long appeared to be somewhat miffed that the administration had not registered its opposition before the committee had acted. But other members seemed relieved about the switch, and agreed to it unanimously.

Under current law, an employee pays 5.85% of his or her first $16,500 in annual salary, a maximum of $965 a year, and that contribution is matched by the employer. The Finance Committee plan would have increased the contribution by less than $1 a week.

According to Long, Califano said the administration is concerned that raising Social Security taxes would counteract some of the effects of President Carter's plan to prime the economy by cutting income taxes. Califano said the administration is opposed to the tax hike and the committee should reconsider.

"I know how difficult it is to approve a tax increase when the president opposes it," Long told reporters. To his colleagues on the committee, the chairman added: "We have no business assuming we are going to raise Social Security taxes if the administration is advocating against it."

"A tax increase isn't all that popular," he added. "Any time the President is willing to recommend that we begin covering some of this deficit (in the Social Security system) I'm willing to do my part. If they are willing to carry the ball, I'm willing to do what I can."

The committee had shown support for a $1-billion increase in the Social Security tax, along with $500 million worth of benefit increases.

The panel considers a tax increase necessary if the Social Security system is to remain solvent.

There was little discussion when the committee showed tentative support for higher tax breaks for working parents and parents of college students.

FEA acts to soak up excess oil profits

Washington (UPI) — The Federal Energy Administration, acknowledging it was taking a fairly drastic step to soak up excess oil industry profits, Wednesday rolled back the price for so-called "new" domestic crude oil by 45 cents a barrel.

FEA officials said the rollback — the third in 13 months — is designed to cure a problem created by the agency's regulations and will remain in effect through the end of July. They said it should have little or no impact on consumers.

In a related development, the American Petroleum Institute announced U.S. oil imports last week climbed above 10 million barrels per day for the first time in the nation's history. Oil producers say domestic price ceilings have held back U.S. production, driving imports higher than necessary.

The rollback announced Wednesday is the latest of several steps the FEA has taken in an effort to get the average price of domestic oil down to the level set in late 1975, when Congress created a two-price system keyed to the average between old and new oil prices. New oil comes from wells drilled since 1973.

Agency officials said a miscalculation of the average between the two prices let oil companies collect $320 million in excess profits through December, the last month for which figures are available. It said the rollback is designed to counteract that excess.

Petroleum industry officials greeted the new rollback with anger and dismay.

"This is a slam in the face of those who went out and searched for domestic oil with what they thought were assurances of certainty as to crude oil pricing," said A.V. Jones Jr. of Albany, Tex., president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Voice contact made with trapped coal miner

Tower City, Pa. (AP) — Voice contact was made Wednesday night with one of eight miners trapped since midday Tuesday inside a flooded coal mine, a mining official said.

There was no word on the other seven miners entombed a mile inside a 400-foot mountain in the heart of Pennsylvania's hard coal region.

Rescuers bored through 60 feet of solid anthracite, then spliced a one-and-a-quarter-inch pipe capped at the end to keep out dirt. Deep inside the mountain, at the other end of the pipe, miner Ronald Adley removed the cap and told rescuers he was alive.

The searchers had heard a tapping noise as they assembled the pipe. It was the first sign of life from inside the pitch-black mine where 10 miners were trapped at midday Tuesday when a torrent of water flooded in through a tunnel in the Kocher Coal Co. mine.

So far, two bodies have been found. The men who made contact with Adley fed juice to the 37-year-old miner through the same pipe used to confirm he was alive.

At the mine entrance, where relatives of the trapped men kept vigils, Adley's mother and sister hugged each other.

"They talked to him!" said Carol Krieser, Adley's sister.

"They heard sounds at first," said Adley's brother-in-law, Steve Kafora. "Then he gave his name. There's no doubt."

Kafora said he knew Adley would be safe because he worked in an area that would have been on high ground when the water broke through.

Ford at Vail

Former President Gerald Ford sported a new ski cap and goggles as he watched heavy snow fall on the slopes at Vail, Colo., Wednesday.

He skied for the first time since arriving at the Rocky Mountain resort for a week-long vacation. A hot whirlpool bath soothed an aching back muscle.

He said his skis were longer than those he used while skiing as president and said he would "probably go a little slower."

Daniel Berrigan out of jail

Daniel Berrigan, a former priest, has completed a 30-day jail sentence in Arlington, Va. It was imposed after he led a demonstration of 29 pacifists outside the Pentagon last month.

Berrigan was quoted as saying, "We'll be back again unless President Carter crashes the B1 bomber and sinks the Trident submarine."

Snow deep in Utah

United Press International

A winter storm Wednesday dropped foot-deep snows in Utah, discouraged a state-hired snowmaker in the Colorado Rockies and speared northeastward into the Upper Midwest.

Ten inches of snow fell on Salt Lake City and more than a foot in Utah's mountains. Helena, Mont., with six inches of snow, had its greatest 24-hour accumulation since late December.

Travelers were urged to stay off highways in northern Utah. Motorists without snow tires or chains were ordered off Wolf Creek Pass in southern Colorado.

Snowmaker Larry Hjermstad, hired by the state to augment the snowpack in the Colorado Rockies, said temperatures accompanying the snow were too low and the snow not wet enough for cloud seeding operations with portable silver iodide generators.

"Consequently," he said, "we'll let this one (storm) do it by itself. This storm had marginal amounts of moisture to begin with."

Skiing was reported excellent — and the avalanche danger extremely high — in Utah's Wasatch Range. Skiers in Colorado, including former President Ford, on a vacation at Vail, hoped for loads of powder snow.

Snow fell over most of the Rockies and western plateau from Nevada to the Great Plains and from New Mexico to Montana.

Gonzalez' resignation as Assassinations Committee chairman not accepted

United Press International
Richard A. Sprague
... called a 'scoundrel.'

Washington (AP) — Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez submitted his resignation as chairman of the House Committee on Assassinations Wednesday in his battle with Chief Counsel Richard A. Sprague, calling Sprague an "unconscionable scoundrel."

Sprague made no early comment.

The Texas Democrat submitted his resignation in a letter to Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill. The Speaker said the resignation would have to be considered by the full House, raising the prospect of a divisive floor fight.

O'Neill said he would not submit the resignation for a House verdict until he talked to Gonzalez.

Republican Conference Chairman John B. Anderson of Illinois said, "the life of the committee still hangs by a slim thread."

In his resignation letter, Gonzalez said "it seems clear now that the House leadership is unwilling to offer me support."

"Yet I cannot bring myself to sign pay vouchers for an unscrupulous individual, an unconscionable scoundrel, and no power on earth can compel me to do so," Gonzalez wrote.

"Under the circumstances that now exist I have no alternative but to resign from the Select Committee on Assassinations herewith."

The committee investigation of the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., has been embroiled in controversy since the day Congress convened in January.

The probe came to a virtual standstill Feb. 10 when Gonzalez tried to fire Sprague for refusing to say which staff people could be fired to cut costs. All other members told Sprague to stay put on grounds any firing has to be done by the committee, not the chairman alone.

The House has given the committee only temporary life through the end of this month and must decide either to disband it or continue it for the two-year life of the Congress.

Gonzalez said in his letter to the speaker that Sprague "refused to produce any kind of information on which the committee could make rational budget decisions."

Further, Gonzalez said, "since he pursued a deliberate course of action to undermine me with members of the committee and staff alike, I had no recourse but to dismiss him, which I did."

"I found in the committee an administrative nightmare," Gonzalez wrote. "I found a chief counsel who assumed full powers of the committee itself (and by implication usurped the powers of the House itself); a chief counsel who was insubordinate and insulting not to mention disloyal."

"I found unjustifiable salaries, unjustified employees and reckless, inexplicable financial obligations," Gonzalez said. "I had a responsibility to act and no one has yet demonstrated that I acted wrongly or without full cause."

The situation appeared similar to the fight in the last Congress between then Chairman Lucien N. Nedzi, D-Mich., and fellow Democrats on a Select House Intelligence Committee.

Nedzi resigned and former Speaker Carl Albert put his resignation before the full House which voted to refuse to accept it.

But that committee remained deadlocked by the dispute and the House finally replaced it with a new committee with Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., as its chairman

Widowers' difficulty in collecting benefits is held sex discrimination

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court, in an action which could affect more than a half-million American men, ruled 5 to 4 Wednesday that making it harder for widowers and husbands to collect Social Security benefits is unfair sex discrimination.

Under the law, a man applying for such benefits through his wife's earnings must show that he is or was receiving at least half his support from her. A woman in a like situation gets the benefits anyway.

Education and Welfare said the ruling could extend such benefits to at least 220,000 widowers and about 299,000 husbands this year at an overall additional cost of $447 million by June.

The particular woman in question was Hannah Goldfarb of New York, who worked almost 25 years as a secretary in the city's public school system. When she died her husband, Leon Goldfarb, 72, a retired federal employee, was turned down for a widower's benefit because he had not been receiving half his support from her.

Rehnquist, speaking for himself and the other three dissenters, said statistics show only about one-tenth of the women in the required age bracket are nondependent, while the incidence of dependent husbands among all married couples is about 1%.

Thus he said Congress could have geared the law to the least administrative expense and this element may be more important in Social Security cases than in other areas of the law.

But Stevens pointed out that the government "has paid a truly staggering price for a relatively modest administrative gain" by paying about $750 million a year to widows who are not really dependent.

As of 1974, more than 3.5 million widows were receiving benefits, he said.

Panel says urban riots of the 1960s could happen again

Washington (UPI) — A government task force said Thursday the urban rioting of the 1960s could recur and urged communities to make contingency plans against disorder and terrorism.

Recommendations included wiretapping, mass arrests and granting police immunity from prosecution or suit for emergency actions done in good faith.

"The present tranquility is deceptive," the task force said in a report to Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell. "Many of the traditional indicators for disorders are clearly present and need but little stimulus to activate them."

But Jerry Wilson, the former Washington, D.C., police chief who headed the Justice Department Task Force on Disorders and Terrorism, presented a far rosier picture at a news briefing.

"Our task force did not see any increased potential (for widespread urban disorders) at this time," Wilson said. "In fact, the contrary is true, for the next few years. The mood of the country at this time is good."

New Jersey Gov. Brendan Byrne, chairman of the National Advisory Committee on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals, said, "The task force set out to prepare for the worst."

It detailed 100 "standards and goals" in a 660-page report intended to help small communities cope with civil disorders and terrorism

It recommended, for example, that police be immune from criminal and civil liability for emergency actions taken in good faith.

The report also endorsed wiretapping to discover impending disorders or terrorism.

The report also included provision for mass arrests

Burglar may be 10th-story man

Roanoke, Va. (AP) — Roanoke police are looking for a burglar who might best be described as a 10th-story man.

The thief climbed 150 feet to the top of a T-crane at the building site of a 10-story parking garage here, police said, then broke into the crane operator's control gondola.

Operator Mike Young, 26, said the burglar took his binoculars and a stereo tape player.

Young said he kept the binoculars on hand "for checking out women."

'Business as usual' people are kidding themselves

"Anything you try to force people to do against their will, will get a lot of opposition," said a candidate for local office at a meeting this week. Aside from being somewhat redundant, the statement has the ring of truth to it, especially in the context in which it was offered: the extent of government involvement in energy conservation.

A lot of people oppose mandatory conservation measures, especially if it means government employees will be around inspecting, enforcing, imposing and demanding.

A lot of people also are not facing up to reality with regard to the energy picture at this point in history, which hopefully will be described as the last years of the Age of Waste.

Not that we believe that the city getting into the insulation business is essential, for example. And we don't relish the thought of government snoops checking on our thermostat settings.

But it should be obvious — and to many it isn't — that the days of business as usual are numbered. If people can come to that realization on their own, so much the better.

Putting the problem in a different light, Councilwoman Sue Bailey, speaking at the same meeting, suggested that individual conservation initiatives such as better insulation or car-pooling "are small concerns." What is needed, she said, is "a long-range view of changing the way we use energy."

No doubt penetrating analyses of the energy and resources problem are needed to help steer mankind around future obstacles, but we can't help remembering the Chinese saying about a journey of a thousand miles beginning with a single step. You have to start somewhere.

Can a people who refuse to take oil embargoes and natural gas shortages seriously, who complain about government energy conservation proposals, who want to continue living as we have lived in the past, who scoff at suggested inconveniences such as carpooling or public transportation, who think that more is better and refuse to acknowledge that less is what we'll probably get — can such a people refusing to take the first single step be expected to accept long-range solutions on a grand scale?

But Mrs. Bailey is right about individual efforts being "small concerns," as important as they are.

If everybody in Nebraska were more careful about how much water, for example, they used in flushing the toilet, washing dishes or brushing teeth, the savings would be comparatively minuscule. The overwhelming bulk of water use in this state is large-scale use, mainly crop irrigation. If a single farmer saved, say, an inch of water over the entire growing season through better irrigating practices, it would amount to an astronomical number of toilet flushings, teeth brushings and dish washings. And a lot of energy would be saved.

The emphasis is probably what Mrs. Bailey was talking about and fundamental changes on a grander scale are probably in order.

But the prospects for fundamental change without government mandate are slim if even the slightest inconveniences are resisted at the individual level.

Gonzalez quits circus

The select House committee's attempt to investigate again the assassinations of John Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. has taken on the aspects of a circus.

The situation was only partly cleared up Wednesday when Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez resigned, denouncing committee staff director Richard Sprague as "an unscrupulous individual, an unconscionable scoundrel."

Gonzalez had tried to fire Sprague, while other committee members, including Rep. Charles Thone of Nebraska, have told Sprague to stay on the job.

It had been said that either Sprague or Gonzalez must yield, that there was not room enough on the committee for both. Gonzalez has yielded, but that does not insure Sprague's future on the committee by any means.

The whole venture seems ill-fated.

March, you scoundrel . . .

By La Verna Hassler
Star Feature Writer

March, you scoundrel, you come sneaking up on me before I am ready for you. Oh, there were signs that you were about to make an entry. The tulips and daffodils in the sunny south location under my window are pushing up through the leaf mold and the red-wing blackbirds are back staking their claim for a nesting site when the females arrive in a couple of weeks.

I am still viewing my backyard garden plot through wintertime's eyes. I have yet to "order" from the seed catalog that arrived some time ago and the quilt that I planned to get into the frame for quilting during the long winter evenings has not been completed.

But now as I look about me, I know that I have become lax in anticipating spring. I see it in the green grass of the sheltered hillsides and ditches. I hear it in the song of the larks as they fly into the sun, then fall earthward, letting their rapturous notes patter like fairy bells. I smell it in the wind when it brings a mist across the valley. I have followed the first flight of wild fowl across the sky on their relentless journey toward their Canadian nesting sites.

Whether March has come too early for me with spring hovering just beyond the next hill matters not. The changing seasons abide by another law independent of human management.

That is reward enough. It spares me anxiety and despair.

Suppose Congress had to decide when Yesterday with spring-like temperatures in the sixties I took down the long garden hose and watered the trees and shrubs about the house. The water disappeared shortly into the ground. For some time the ground has not been frozen. In fact, there are those who say the ground never did freeze very much this winter because the soil was too dry.

I would like to see a return to colder weather and snow. It is much too early for such unseasonable warmth as we have had.

I am in agreement with The Farmer who said of the new snow shovel he purchased last fall, "I would like to wear a little of the new paint off that shovel."

As it is, very little snow removal has been done with it. It is as new looking and bright as the day he brought it home. Maybe I'll put it in Santa's pack for next year's Christmas gift to The Farmer.

Washington — The pollsters have been out measuring President Carter's popularity against his squeaky margin of victory last November, and they have made the unsurprising discovery that he is much more popular now than when he was elected.

This follows the normal trend after close presidential elections. Truman, Kennedy and Johnson all picked up points in the first few weeks after they came into the White House. Carter's gains, however, are more impressive, and reflect more than the natural support for a new president. But what is interesting about this is that he is gaining in national popularity just when some of his own people in Washington are saying it is far too early to reach decisions about what will happen when he really has to face the hard, divisive issues.

There is general agreement here about Carter's main achievements since the Inauguration. He has taken command. He has put together a competent cabinet including a superb vice president. He has dominated the news. He has imposed his own unique personality, style and moral authority on the government, but this is still a very young and incomplete administration, which has not yet run into what Vice President Mondale calls "the hard rocks in the road."

For example, Carter has talked a great deal about the need for reorganization and efficiency in the Washington — The temptation is strong to look for another Jimmy Carter among the state governors who have been meeting here in their annual mid-winter conference. But the truth is that even Jimmy Carter — some of his former colleagues would say particularly Jimmy Carter — didn't look much like a future president when he used to attend these meetings as governor of Georgia.

Not that there aren't some reasonable prospects — Brown of California, Thompson of Illinois, maybe even the new Democratic Rockefeller from West Virginia — among the current crop of governors. It's just that governors going about their business tend to sound more narrowly parochial than presidents or even presidential candidates.

Take the question of energy, one of the dominant concerns at the mid-winter conference. Henry Jackson of Washington, chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, put the problem plainly in a morning address.

"There is no magic formula to end our energy ills," he told the governors. Instead, he said, "hard choices and painful trade-offs between competing interests" would have to be made.

Everybody was talking about such choices and trade-offs here, but it was not clear that anyone was prepared to do much about them. As Gov. Mike O'Callaghan of Nevada

A disorganized White House

executive branch, but some of his own most prominent aides feel that his own White House staff is not exactly a model of either good organization or efficiency.

This criticism, incidentally, is usually directed mainly at Hamilton Jordan, the President's closest adviser, and at Frank Moore, his principal liaison officer with the Congress. Cabinet members complain that they cannot get expeditious clearance for their appointments from Jordan, that he doesn't answer their calls and even loses their papers, all of which has slowed down the organization of a government that still hasn't filled half of the appointments that have to go to the Senate for confirmation.

Moore is in a real tussle with members of Congress now, for the administration is beginning to fill the top federal jobs out in the country: regional directors of Health, Education and Welfare, Housing and Urban Development, Transportation, etc. Here there are endless conflicts between Carter's insistence on competence, and the Capitol Hill pressures for patronage, so that Moore, like Jordan, is overwhelmed.

Perhaps a more serious complaint here is that Carter has been so dominant and successful in his first few weeks that he is not getting the hard, open criticism from his Cabinet that he invited and promised. Also, that he is too "trustful" of cabinet members who tell him they are cutting out unnecessary bureaus, and takes them at their word without checking their assurances.

Incidentally, nobody accuses Jordan of going soft on Carter. Even those who say he is disorganized praise him for his bluntness. He told the President the other day, for example, that he wasn't going to the weekly cabinet meetings any longer for they were a "waste of time."

Vice President Mondale has a different view or at least an explanation of all this. He notes that Jordan is not an issues man, but an organization, personnel, and human relations political man who doesn't have to spend two hours at a cabinet meeting listening to discussion of the energy problem.

"If people think that Carter doesn't see through thin arguments, or they believe that the mere assertion of something will be accepted by him as its fulfillment," Mondale says, "They don't know Carter. He always listens respectfully. I've been in a hundred meetings where I was afraid he was going to buy a bag of dishwater, only to find out afterward that he understood perfectly well what the problem was."

"There's no question," Mondale added, "that we've a lot to learn and mistakes have been made. We're not perfectly organized. The question is not how quickly we fill these offices but how well we fill them, both in terms of quality and in terms of their representativeness. I must say after 12 years in the Senate, I had no notion of how difficult it would be. I'll tell you, it takes time to fulfill these concepts of bringing new people into power. The FBI is just being inundated by our requests. Sometimes it takes three, four or even five weeks before we get the necessary clearances . . ."

All of which suggests that it is easier to take a poll and get a good scorecard with the public than to organize a government and satisfy Washington. In the 40 days these people have been in charge, they have been running so hard they've scarcely had time to think.

"These organization things," Mondale concludes, "are minor compared to the issues we're facing. The question is whether the White House is organized in a way so that most of the President's time can be spent on the serious issues. That's all that counts around here, and I believe the answer is yes."

Others close to the President would agree with Mondale's definition but argue with his conclusion, for there is a growing feeling that the organization is not yet in good order and that the disorganization is preventing the President from spending most of his time on "the serious issues."

Governors bicker, dicker

put it, too many states liked to talk about "our oil" and "our coal" but "your nuclear waste."

One of the most important trade-offs Sen. Jackson no doubt had in mind was that between environmentalists and energy producers. But to hear these governors talk, the environmentalists should do most of the trading off. Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire noted approvingly that Congress had "got away from all environmental restraints" in authorizing construction of the Alaskan pipeline. What was the prospect, he asked Cecil Andrus, for such an unrestricted policy for oil leases off the Atlantic Coast?

Andrus, looking as if he wished he were still governor of Idaho instead of secretary of the interior, said he couldn't speak for Congress. Thomson then turned on James R. Schlesinger, the President's cabinet-level energy adviser. Would the administration continue a "patchwork approach" to energy policy with a low priority for the nuclear power he said would make New England less dependent on imported oil and gas?

Schlesinger, clamping down on his pipe and temper, replied that the Carter administration would have a "comprehensive" policy ready in April and that at least until other sources became available, "We shall have to develop our nuclear power resources." Andrus pointed out that President Carter, despite some expressed reservations about nuclear power, had never said it would not be part of the "overall mix."

"WE ARE HOLDING THE NORTHEAST HOSTAGE" DEREGULATE NATURAL GAS OR THEY FREEZE."

Gov. Julian Carroll of Kentucky said his state had experimented with a forum in which environmentalists and industrialists had come together to talk things over with "amazing" results. The environmentalists found out the industrialists "didn't have horns on their heads," he said, and the industrialists learned that environmentalists "didn't all wear tennis shoes and long hair." He urged a "national forum" of that kind on Schlesinger and Andrus.

Jay Rockefeller (whose name earned him a laugh when he prefaced his remarks, "Speaking of oil . . .") expressed concern about the higher cost of reclaiming strip-mined land in West Virginia and the East than in the West, which gives western coal a price advantage. Gov. Thomas Judge of Montana complained that his state provided electric power generation for the state of Washington, but that environmentalists there were objecting to unloading Alaskan oil in Puget Sound ports. Gov. Dixy Lee Ray of Washington conceded the point, but said the environmentalists were outside agitators.

Gov. Richard Lamm of Colorado, who sounded more sympathetic to the environment than most of his colleagues, raised another problem. What about communities overwhelmed by new energy production? He cited Craig, Colorado, where expanded coal mining operations have raised the population from 2,000 to 7,000 and growth is projected to perhaps 14,000; the community had "yelled enough," Gov. Lamm said, by defeating several school bond issues.

It remained for Andrus to formulate the ideal trade-off. When Gov. Dolph Briscoe of Texas said that with proper care oil and gas could be extracted "in an environmentally safe manner," Andrus agreed that "there's nothing prettier than those cattle grazing out there among the pumps in Texas."

For some, a weak signal

significance to all of us and of only one year's importance to Mr. Stoeger and his coach, Powell. Stoeger can wrestle next year if he takes his academic studies seriously, and Valentine could have the No. 1 spot in Class B. All of us here would like that. But can a school system recover that quickly from a precedent that effectively places scholastic achievement in a position second to athletics?

A short phone call to Stoeger's teachers may have given some balance to Stoeger's self-serving remarks (no one here is "down on the whole team"). And a greater authority on high school grading systems might have been found than a wrestling coach only just this year from Wyoming. The Star has done no one a service by summarizing several days of turmoil in our community with statements from only two such obviously biased participants. What did The Star have to gain?

I would say I'm disappointed, but I have had some experience with sports coverage in The Star over the last 10 years and it has remained as it was — a study in journalistic mediocrity.

Finally, let us strike a deal. If The Star can refrain from meddling in our educational system, I will discontinue reading the sports coverage and thus will not continuously feel the need to correct and chastise the sophomoric efforts

DUANE GUDGEL
Editor's note: First of all, Dave Sittler and Randy York are both graduates of the University of Nebraska School of Journalism, considered one of the nation's best. Not once in Sittler's account of the story did he allow his own opinion on the issue to seep in. He merely discovered a human interest story, pursued it and wrote about it, interviewing the two subjects who were most affected by the situation. The Valentine School District did not qualify for the state wrestling tournament. Gary Stoeger did. The Star reporter wrote about him in a completely professional manner, tactfully avoiding any and all editorialization.

Destruction of trees
Yutan, Neb.
WE ARE CONCERNED! We want to go on record as two people who are adamantly opposed to the wanton destruction of beautiful trees along our highway system.

We live in the country about 30 miles west of Omaha. We work in Omaha so we see the progress of destructive machinery every day. Those trees have been growing for 20 or 40 years or more to attain their present size and beauty, and the State Department of Roads is wiping out 10 or more each day just between Valley and Omaha. There is no evidence of a replanting program, either.

Having just recently returned from an auto tour of all six New England states where trees line the road shoulders and arch majestically over the roadways, we are even more deeply aware of the value of maintaining this beautiful natural resource.

We can point out many economic and ecological values in saving our trees, which might impress the department more — holding moisture in the soil, returning moisture to the air, preventing soil erosion, breaking wind and preventing wind erosion of topsoil, livestock and wild animal shelter, to name only a few fairly obvious ones.

The roads are quite ample for cars. If our car goes off the road — may it be stopped by a tree.

Out in the open

Lincoln, Neb.
Senator Jack Mills has introduced LB323 to allow the electors to vote on a constitutional amendment to allow the Legislature to "exempt from taxation or grant as a credit against tax the value and installation cost of solar energy system or devices for residential, commercial, industrial or governmental purpose." If we go to the expense of voting on such an amendment, it should be extended to include other areas of resource conservation. Perhaps he should include: (1) heat insulation of all structures (2) double glazing on all windows; (3) windmills and associated electrical devices to supply electrical power to all structures; (4) bicycles for all individuals who would like to save on gasoline; (5) hiking boots for those who would rather walk; (6) trailer homes for those who would like to save fuel by going south for the winter. With a little thought, this list could be extended indefinitely.

In place of Senator Mills' bill, someone should introduce a bill to allow the electors to vote on a constitutional amendment to direct the Legislature to use the tax laws specifically to raise revenues and forbid the use of the tax laws to hinder with various schemes of social engineering. Any subsidies for special interests should be out in the open and not hidden in our tax laws.

TED JORGENSEN

Limited scope

Fairbury, Neb.
I applaud the fact that a recent survey has shown that so many Nebraskans feel that NETV programming "is worth their tax dollar investment." I agree that the network is "extremely or very important." But what the survey and the resulting media coverage forgot to mention was just how many out of every 10 Nebraskans cannot receive any NETV programming without being hooked to a cable. As a taxpayer, presumably supporting the network, I would be interested in knowing.

In the Fairbury area, unless one is within reach of the cable, which services only the immediate city, it is virtually impossible to tune in NETV. One primary function of the network, it seems to me, is to improve the quality of life in rural Nebraska. Anyone who has driven for more than two minutes in any direction from Fairbury knows the meaning of "rural."

Perhaps those responsible at the network could take some time out from patting themselves on the back about the results of the survey and consider whether or not their advertising statement during station breaks is legitimate and truthful. They say: "NETV — Serving ALL Nebraskans."

The Brothers Skoda

Ulysses, Neb.
In regard to Mr. York's article in the Friday Star, "Skoda brothers come out winners, losers in C-4," I am sure I am only one of many fans of East Butler who think Rick Skoda is truly as fine an athlete as his brother, Randy. However, Rick was hurt in football, wore a cast and was on crutches for months and finally ended up having surgery on it. This is his first full season being able to play and I, along with many others, think he has played some great ball and we at East Butler are proud of him and our team.

I really don't think it is necessary to run anyone down to write an article.

JUDITH HROMAS
Editor's note: Mr. York's article is so way intended to run anyone down. The article simply binged on the rather unusual occurrence of brothers on opposing teams.

Sports story

Valentine, Neb.
Regarding a Feb. 18 story by Dave Sittler about Gary Stoeger of Valentine, both Randy York, prep sports editor, and Mr. Sittler must have survived what small amount of education they exhibit by the good graces of their coaches. I am sure Mr. Stoeger is a fine young man and wrestler, and I'm just as certain that the story of his temporary suspension from wrestling deserved some coverage. And the tearful scene presented by The Star reporter indicates some of his skill at propaganda but it tells us even more about his journalistic abilities. How could The Star ever justify keeping a story of this caliber off the editorial page?

Mr. Sittler's entire story was based on the statements of two participants in the incident, both of whom take the same position against the remainder of the Valentine public school system (excluding the superintendent and one school board member). The story never once mentions the positions of some dedicated educators who staked entire careers on an issue of lasting

1924 big game remembered

By Maxine Wolf
State Editor

Schuyler — Memories linger on although the "big game" was played 53 years ago this month.

That big game came in the finals of the 1924 Nebraska high school girls' basketball tournament when Schuyler's team walked off with Class A championship honors.

Schuyler defeated 1923 champs Sterling 18-19 on that March Saturday night in Lincoln, marking the end of high school girls' basketball tournaments in Nebraska until this year's revival. The game was played on the courts at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

One member of that 1924 Schuyler team, Mrs. Stanley Fraser of Delray, Fla., this week recalled what a "great thrill" it was for the girls to be state champions.

The former Dorothy Schrader, Mrs. Fraser remembers her father closing his Schuyler hardware store — "an almost unheard of action" — in order to attend the tournament.

Big black bloomers, black stockings and middie blouses with square collars were the uniforms for all the female players, Mrs. Fraser laughingly recalls.

Traveling to Lincoln and home via train, the Schuyler team was met by the high school band upon arrival at the Schuyler depot after the three-day tournament, Mrs. Fraser said.

Schuyler's champs took home with them a loving cup, presented by the Havelock Businessmen's Club. This cup, still holding a place today with other trophies in the Schuyler High School library, bears these team members' names: Alice Smatlan, Marguerite Tully, Dorothy Schrader, Bessie Richardson, Alice Riley, Luvone Jenkins, Blanche Bosh, Leita Babcock and Marylou Campbell, coach.

A check with longtime Schuyler residents revealed Alice Riley (now Mrs. Hunt) also resides in Florida. Blanche Bosh (Mrs. John Twiss) lives in San Diego, Calif., while Alice Smatlan (Mrs. Martin Schultz) is an Oregon resident. The whereabouts of Bessie Richardson and Leita Babcock are unknown. Two of the team members are deceased, Marguerite Tully (Mrs. Carroll Develon) and Luvone Jenkins (Mrs. Harold Macrae), both of Columbus, as well as coach Marylou Campbell (Mrs. Tom Costello).

EPA employee: Lawyers need training in specialty

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

An environmental lawyer told a group of University of Nebraska-Lincoln law students Wednesday that "lawyers alone can't change the status of the nation's environment."

Roger Hanson, an employee of the national Environmental Protection Agency, working on a national environmental study, told the group gathered at the annual UNL Law Day, that "we need lawyer engineers, lawyer biologists, lawyer technicians . . . to fight for a national policy on environmental protection."

These people would be trained in law plus a specialty field, and would play a vital role "increasing public awareness of the problems of their environment."

This public awareness is one of three steps in the great environmental equality revolution which Hanson says is coming.

There are two other phases, the attention getting and the institutional arrangements phases, he explained.

"Environmentalists have let us (the nation) down. They go out and oppose the building of a power plant, but they don't follow through if they lose. They just move on to another problem," Hanson said.

He suggested they should be proposing changes in the plans for the power plants, trying to get them built in more suitable areas, etc.

The whole ecology movement started in 1970, "when somebody discovered Earth Day." Now, six years later, the nation has turned its efforts to "the energy crisis."

"The energy crisis is more than just adding another five inches of insulation to our homes, and turning down the thermostat. . . It's going to require a major change in lifestyles. We may all have to return to the Summer of '42," he said.

"Man is a visitor here. The wilderness was here first, and man has to learn to respect, and live in grace, with that environment," he added.

Laws governing the environment date back to 1916 when the National Park Act was enacted. The Water Pollution Act of 1948 and the Clean Air Act of 1955 are also on the books, he said.

In 1975, 6,000 environmental impact statements were filed, another 30,000 were applied for. "That should be enough legal basis to keep a lot of lawyers in work for years to come," he added.

Farm wives continue to call for increased support prices

Washington (UPI) — A delegation of farm wives campaigned Wednesday for an increase in farm support prices.

"I think we will get some increase in support prices," one of them, Mrs. Marian Lenzen of Sidney, Neb., said following a series of appearances before the House and Senate Agriculture Committees. "And I think there'll be an increase in target prices too."

"But it's not going to be 100% of parity," said Mrs. Lenzen, speaking for the group called WIFE — Women Involved in Farm Economics. "I don't see any way we're going to get that."

The women met with Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland. Mrs. Lenzen said he made no commitments on future supports but repeated an earlier pledge that he will soon consider an "adjustment" in previously announced supports for 1976 wheat, corn and soybeans.

Bergland also told the women he and a top Canadian official are trying to "work out" a joint Canadian-American arrangement to put a floor under wheat markets.

The WIFE delegation, which plans to leave here Thursday after final meetings with Congressional and government officials, came from Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas and Wyoming. Most of the group meeting with Bergland were from Colorado.

In a session with other agriculture officials, WIFE members repeated their demand that crop support loans should be raised to equal full farm production costs. They said target prices, which are set above the support rates and serve to trigger direct farm payments if markets are below the targets, should be boosted to 100% of the farm parity price level.

Mrs. Lenzen told agriculture economist Terry Barr in a meeting that farm women "feel we cannot trust the government to stay out of our business" with export embargoes or price controls when prices are high.

Picketer pleads innocent to breaking windshield

Dakota City (AP) — A 22-year-old Jackson man appeared in Dakota County Court Tuesday in connection with an incident at the Iowa Beef Processors plant at Dakota City.

William Gill pleaded innocent to a charge pressed by the Dakota County sheriff in connection with the breaking of a windshield of an IBP car parked at the plant.

Gill was released on $1,000 bond. He was picketing along with other members of Local 222 of the Amalgamated Meatcutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, who struck the plant at midnight last Friday. The incident took place late Monday night.

In a related development, officials of Farm Products, Inc. which leases space in the IBP plant, said some of their workers were hesitant to cross picket lines the first day they went up.

"Most of our employees are women, and they had a wait-and-see attitude.

But every day, a few more cross," said Bob Lystrup, the firm's vice president.

The 350 employees at Farm Products are not members of the meatcutters union, Lystrup said.

He said production at his plant has not been interrupted by the strike at IBP.

G.I. power needs discussed

Grand Island (UPI) — Grand Island residents were told Tuesday night the city's power needs have grown 561% during the past 22 years.

Bob Olson, city utilities director, said during the past 30 years. The city's electrical growth rate increased an average of 9% annually, compared with the national average of 7%.

"We have doubled our power requirements every eight years," Olson told a town hall meeting called by the city council to discuss the city's future power status.

The Nebraska Power Review Board is currently considering an appeal of its earlier decision against the Great Plains Power Agency's proposal to build a power facility near Doniphan for the cities of Grand Island and Hastings.

The three alternatives suggested for future Grand Island power needs discussed at the town hall meeting were to build a power plant with Hastings, purchase power from the Nebraska Public Power District or have a power facility solely for Grand Island's use."

Olson said by 1980 the city would need a 125-megawatt peak load capacity compared with the present maximum output of 120 megawatts.

Attorney John Wagoner, who served on a citizens power committee in 1974, said he would recommend against purchasing power from NPPD.

"NPPD has never quoted one figure as to what they would charge to supply the power to this community," Wagoner said.

Wagoner said the Great Plains Power Agency should be "left to die because it's too dead a cat to skin."

Merle McDermot, spokesman for the Grand Island Taxpayers Association, also recommended against reviving the Great Plains agency.

Victims' families win $3.6 million settlement

Houston (UPI) — Families of four construction executives killed in an Alaskan airplane crash last year have settled damage suits against two air service companies for $3.6 million.

Texas District Judge John Snell approved the agreement Tuesday between Management Jets Inc. of Lincoln, Neb., owner of the plane;

Winship Air Service Inc., the charter service and the plaintiffs.

Awards of $900,000 each went to the families of Gerard A. Dobelman and Victor J. Abadie Jr. of Houston and Warren T. Moore and Wolfgang Pabst of Anchorage, Alaska, all executives of Brown & Root Inc. or affiliates.

Majors Hall stands empty because of declining enrollments

Peru State College has hopes on athletic center

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

Peru — Peru State College Athletics have grown tired, and a bit scared, of playing in three rooms of a converted boiler room and a building once furnished as a chapel.

Tired, because the chapel-gymnasium originally was constructed in 1903, remodeled in 1922 and added to in 1950.

Scared, because of splinters and nails that keep popping up through the gym floor. A Peru State coed and member of the girls' basketball team had to have five stitches to close a wound when she fell on a nail during a recent game.

Officials of the college, once faced with a declining enrollment and an unused but reasonably new dormitory, have come up with an idea to boost enrollment through an athletic program that would utilize a dorm and some new construction.

With the blessings of the Peru Achievement Foundation, the plan to build the Peru State College Health and Physical Education Center has won the support of Utica Senator Douglas Bereuter.

Bereuter has introduced LB171 to the Unicameral's Appropriations Committee calling for the allocation of funds and construction of the complex. The bill will be heard in committee Monday, March 7, at 1:30 p.m.

The plan is to purchase Majors Hall dormitory by clearing the bond indebtedness on the building which was completed in 1965 and to remodel half the dorm to house health center facilities and physical education classrooms and offices.

New construction would include an arena and pool on the dorm's west end. Cost of the new building and remodeling is estimated at $2.4 million. An additional $450,000 would be needed to pay off the dorm bonds. The total price tag, college officials say, would be far less than an estimated $4 million to build a totally new gym.

Here's how Peru State's proposed complex should look.

Government negotiation bias, subsidizing strikes charged

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman for the National Livestock Feeders Association has charged that the federal government is subsidizing labor strikes and supporting inequitable labor-management negotiations.

The comment came from NLFPA Executive Vice President Bill Jones of Omaha in testimony Wednesday before the House Agricultural Committee in Washington.

Jones maintains that "the government is subsidizing strikes by making food stamps available to workers out on strike, and to do so is grossly inequitable in the labor-management negotiating process, because it brings public funds to bear on only one side of the collective bargaining scale."

Such a move on the part of the government, Jones said, is "a two-pronged stab at the taxpayer, since it forces him to pay other persons (strikers) for taking action which can bring him (the taxpayer) substantial economic harm."

He termed labor strikes costly and "almost always contrary to the public interest."

Jones said seven packing plants along the Missouri River presently are closed by strikes. Together, he said, the plants have a weekly slaughter capacity of more than 40,000 cattle and a weekly breaking capacity of nearly 30,000 carcasses.

Referring to the already existing financial problems of cattle producers, Jones said, "The closing of these plants seriously compounds the financial problems facing our people, yet, the deleterious effect such plant closings have on innocent third parties is given no consideration by either organized labor or the federal government."

Yutan group opposes well field in county

Yutan (AP) — An effort will be made by a citizens group to prevent Metropolitan Utilities District of Omaha from developing a water wellfield in the Platte River Valley in Saunders County.

Group leaders said Tuesday night in a meeting at Yutan that they feared MUD withdrawal of water would deplete supplies that residents and farmers need.

The group recommended that the utility increase its water supply by drawing more from the Missouri River.

State Sen. Loran Schmitt of Bellwood and eight other speakers warned of the possible adverse effects of allowing MUD to withdraw water from Saunders County.

MUD currently draws its water from the Missouri, the Platte in Sarpy County and wells near Millard.

Charles Thone worth $279,915

U.S. Rep. Charles Thone disclosed a net worth of $279,915, unchanged in his six years of office. His is believed to be the first such disclosure of financial worth by any member of the Nebraska congressional delegation, past or present.

The First District Republican from Lincoln commented that the disclosure is not "clearing the deck" for possible candidacy for the U.S. Senate in 1978, but that he feels every elected official in Congress and in Nebraska state government should make public an annual statement of net worth.

Thone said equity in their Arlington, Va., house for which they paid about $128,000 in 1973, and Thone's interest in a Cedar County farm in Nebraska accounted for an estimated half of the family's net worth. He said that in the best year, he received no more than $4,000 from the farm's operations.

Federal income taxes paid ranged from $18,389 in 1971, to $6,630 in 1975.

Other assets include common stock for daughters for college, $30,000; self-retirement trust, $10,176; 500 shares of Westgate Bank of Lincoln, $3,250; note receivable, $3,500; life insurance-mutual funds, $22,000; two Ford cars — 1976 Granada and 1976 Pinto, $5,000; household furnishings and jewelry, etc., $25,000; checking account, $7,300.

Curtis wants study on Platte irrigation project

Omaha (AP) — U.S. Sen. Carl Curtis Wednesday introduced a bill to authorize a feasibility study on the proposed Prairie Bend irrigation project in fiscal 1979.

The Nebraska Republican said in a telephone interview that the bill would authorize the Bureau of Reclamation to do the study for construction of a reclamation project along the Platte River in central Nebraska.

The project would be in Hall and Buffalo counties. No specific acreage has been identified, but sponsors estimate that irrigation water could be provided for 60,000 to 70,000 acres.

Mayor might veto license change

Mayor Helen Boosalis said Wednesday that she may veto any action by the City Council to eliminate the limit on licenses for beer sales in restaurants.

Six City Council members have indicated support for the proposal. Five votes are required to override a veto.

Mayor Boosalis said that she supports keeping a limit on the number of liquor licenses in the city and she said she does not want one class of license exempted from the overall limit.

There are now 139 liquor licenses in the city.

Litter, pay amendments sought

Associated Press
The legislature Wednesday gave swift second-round approval to 13 bills, then bumped into two issues that have dominated floor debate—the litter control tax bill and one providing overtime pay for state employees.
Those two bills LB220 and 88, respectively, were also given second-round voice vote approval, but senators requested they be returned for amendments.
Falls City Sen. Nelson Merz wanted to amend Bellwood Sen. Loran Schmit's litter control bill to remove the tax imposed on litter producing products and finance the program with a 50-cent surcharge on motor vehicle license plates.
Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island supported that move.
"I think Sen. Merz has hit the hot spot on this issue," he said.

Sen. Martin Kahle of Kearney said, as a former member of the state Environmental Control Council, he thinks the state needs a method of litter control. Merz' plan, Kahle said, "might not be the best way but it is the simplest presented."
No vote was taken on returning the bill for the amendment, as Schmit, Merz and other senators huddled to mull over the issue.
Then the state employees' overtime issue arose. The bill, LB88, was introduced by Omaha Sen. Bernice Labeledz at the request of the governor.
She wanted to return the bill for an amendment that would require the 40-hour week overtime base to exclude any time not actually worked, such as vacation or sick leave.
She asked to hold the issue until Friday.
But Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett objected because he had an amendment delivered earlier to the clerk's desk.

Barnett's suggested amendment would have required time-and-one-half pay for overtime worked by state employees making less than $8,000. The bill as previously amended includes that provision for those paid less than $10,000. Employees making more than that would receive either overtime pay or compensatory time off, at department directors' discretion.
After nearly an hour of debate and questioning whether legislative employees would be included, Barnett's motion to return the bill for the amendment failed, 18-18.
Senators then returned the bill to consider the Labeledz amendment, adopted it on a 286 vote, and sent the bill on to final reading.

Solons decline to lower statutory rape age limits

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer
Continuing its daily discussion of Nebraska's criminal law, the Legislature Wednesday declined to liberalize the age limits now in effect for crimes of statutory rape.
Current law subjects anyone older than 18 to a felony offense involving one to 50 years imprisonment if he engages in sexual activities with a person younger than 16.
Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh proposed that the age limits be altered to 19 and 15 in order to allow the law to "deal with the reality" of the time.
Needing 25 votes to be approved, the amendment fell three votes short on a 22-17 vote.
What concerned proponents of the change was the definition of "sexual penetration" in current law, which DeCamp and Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln said would make a felony offense out of "heavy petting" if the "victim" is under 16.
The law defines sexual penetration as not only intercourse, but "any intrusion, however slight, of any part of the actor's body."

DeCamp said that makes "Heavy petting," fondling or even touching a young high school student a felony offense if the other partner is college age or older.
Many young people who go to drive-in movies could find themselves subjected to one to 50 years imprisonment even though no force was involved in accompanying sexual activities, he said.
Fowler said he considers the penalty extreme for what may be termed "heavy petting."
Either the age limits should be changed or the penalty reduced, he said.
Sens. Ernest Chambers of Omaha and Ralph Kelly of Grand Island argued against the amendment.
Young girls should be protected from "predator" males, Chambers said.
The proposed change favors the male, is "degrading to women and detrimental to young girls who will be the future mothers of this country," he said.
It would allow more young girls to become victims of seduction, he said.

Unicam OK's tax refund bill

The Unicameral passed legislation Wednesday that appropriates almost $3.7 million to cover repayment of improperly collected property taxes.
The bill readjusts total payment to comply with the amount necessary to cover refunds due for property taxes collected to fund technical community colleges before the State Supreme Court ruled a one mill levy requirement unconstitutional.
The high court decided that the system, as originally structure by law, constituted property taxation for a statewide purpose and was thus barred by the state charter.

Later, the Unicameral restructured the law and gave leeway on the mill levy up to two mills, the system currently in use. However, the taxes collected improperly are being repaid.
The bill, LB475, won easy 36-0 final passage.

Jobless benefits bill introduced

Associated Press
Legislation to broaden categories covered by unemployment insurance was introduced Wednesday in the Unicameral.
"We have no choice," Milligan Sen. Richard Maresh, chairman of the Business and Labor Committee, explained to his colleagues. Federal dictates are involved.
The bill, LB509, would require among other things that employees of the state and its political subdivisions be covered by the system.
With governmental units paying into the unemployment insurance program, the corresponding government budgets would feel some impact.
The bill doesn't include farm workers or domestics, but new federal dictates require in larger firms hiring them the employers' contributions must be made anyway.
Some senators view that as a back-door method of forcing the states to put coverage of farm workers and domestics in the state legislation.
The Business and Labor Committee introduced the bill, but one of its members refused to sign it. Scottia Sen. Dennis Rasmussen earlier called the bill "garbage."
Maresh's analysis that the state has no choice was based on the federal sanctions involved if the state goes out of compliance with program mandates.
Businesses would have to continue contributing for their employees, but would lose tax credit status for those contributions if the state went out of compliance.

Quote attributed to wrong senator

Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett said Wednesday that he was misquoted regarding his personal approach to hypothetical marijuana use by his child.
Barnett was inadvertently reported by an Associated Press story to have said he would beat "hell" out of his kid if marijuana use was determined.
The quote actually was attributable to Omaha Sen. Larry Stoney, whose name was accidentally dropped from the original article.

Public radio legislation said needed

State Sen. Jerome Warner, Waverly, Wednesday received an opinion from Attorney General Paul Douglas that said present statutes prevent the Nebraska Educational Television Network Commission from creating a public radio network.
Douglas said the Unicameral would have to pass enabling legislation before NETV could establish a public radio network, such as the one approved by the NETV commission last summer.
Warner requested the opinion to find out if the Legislature could include funds in NETV's budget to cover the creation of a public radio network.

Bill to raise unemployment benefits held

By Dick Holman

Star Staff Writer
Legislation to increase by $10 the individual weekly unemployment benefit was held in the Business and Labor Committee after a Wednesday hearing. The panel advanced to the Unicameral floor LB504, to appropriate about $120,000 for miscellaneous claims against the state recommended for approval by the State Claims Board.

Committee members heard and held LB505, a bill to deny five claims totaling approximately $38,000 — including one medical case for $34,000 — that drew board disapproval recommendations.

Omaha Sen. Bill Brennan's LB337 would raise the maximum unemployment benefit from $80 to $90, based on a corresponding increase from $1,000 to $2,150 or more of wages paid for insured work.

Nebraska's maximum amount is the third lowest among the 50 states as of last July, according to unemployment insurance data submitted to the state senators. The amount is higher in all states contiguous to Nebraska, Brennan noted.

Passage of the bill would move Nebraska's maximum weekly sum from third up to twelfth lowest, according to the 1976 data.

LB337 won favorable testimony from spokesmen for business and labor, including the AFL-CIO of which Brennan is state president.

About 13,000 recipients in Nebraska would be affected by the bill. The state in No. 1 in the nation in efforts to disqualify ineligible recipients abusing the system, senators were told.

The only opponent testifying against LB337, laundry owner Tom Allman of Lincoln, said that just because Nebraska's maximum benefit is among the least nationally, "that doesn't make it right or wrong."

Allman suggested the committee consider legislation correcting abuses and inequities in the unemployment compensation law and its administration as a companion need with increased benefits. The latter alone isn't enough, he said.

Two other bills, LBs 128 and 424, only partly address the fraud and fairness problems, Allman said.

In an executive session discussion of LB504 — the state liability payments sent out of committee — the members criticized claims by the state colleges and Penal Complex, for example, going through the Claims Board instead of the Legislature's Appropriations Committee. Costs for paying assessments and the red-linked inmates' trust fund should go through the institutions' budgets instead, senators said.

Claims against the state colleges include $70,000 at Chadron and $1,144 at Kearney to pay the cities for paving projects. The grand total in LB504 also includes a $24,000 court-ordered judgment to Ali Shames and family of South Sioux City in a land case.

Legal aid for poor discussed

Associated Press

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee was asked Wednesday to support a bill that would try to make legal help available to poor people confronted by civil cases.

The committee held Lincoln Sen. Steve Fowler's LB367, which would set up a Nebraska Legal Services Commission.

Civil matters in which poor people might need legal assistance include bankruptcies, divorce, civil rights actions and tenant-landlord disputes, Fowler said.

In criminal cases, public defenders or court appointed counsel usually defend the poor, Fowler said.

Currently, only Omaha, Lincoln and Scottsbluff provide legal aid to the poor.

The commission would coordinate legal services for civil cases and could also channel federal and private funds into the state to support civil case assistance.

Dave Piester, executive director of Lincoln's Legal Aid Society, said a national study by the American Bar Association revealed that 23% of those living below the poverty line "have at least one noncriminal legal problem a year."

Lincolnite Lloyd Hendricks was the lone opponent of the bill.

"I don't think the Constitution guarantees every person the right to legal help in civil matters," he said.

"It seems the poor would be getting better legal services than those who can afford it," Hendricks said. "It's another way to create jobs for lawyers."

Who should decide natural gas rates?

Associated Press

Regulation of the natural gas industry in Nebraska could force higher rates, according to the industry, but regulatory proponents are looking for some answers.

"There are no unbiased figures," testified Ted Regier, state chairman of the Natural Gas Users Association. "They're all from the other side."

Regier was speaking of data supplied by natural gas firms when they are justifying rate hikes.

The testimony was offered during a Public Works Committee review of LB252, Big Springs Sen. Jack Mills' bill to turn regulation over to the Public Service Commission.

Currently, gas utility regulation is handled by city councils. Proponents of the Mills' approach claim the current system is a rubberstamp process because of scanty information.

Larry E. Hall, representing Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Co. and eight other natural gas firms serving Nebraska areas, saw no need for the bill.

He said a similar bill was killed last year and an interim study showed regulation at the state level wasn't necessary.

"Nothing has happened in the past seven months to change that determination," he said.

Most rate hikes come from interstate rate changes, he said, which means state regulation wouldn't determine those portions anyway. Costs of the state regulation, however, would push rates in Nebraska up, he indicated.

Mills and Dave Chambers of the League of Municipalities presented results of a survey in which 55% of the respondents in the league favored state regulation.

The committee also reviewed LB450, Utica Sen. Douglas Ber-euter's bill to promote surface water retention through state-aided farm conservation projects that would also help with groundwater recharge.

The bill would set up a Water Conservation Fund and a nine-member advisory board to help get the program off the ground.

Also reviewed was LB377, a bill to force payment of disputed charges to wholesale power suppliers before court action over the dispute rather than after. The bill stems from a dispute between the Lincoln Electric System and the Nebraska Public Power District.

The committee held all three of the bills after taking the testimony.

Panel holds 2 bills to stimulate housing

Associated Press

The Legislature's Urban Affairs Committee Wednesday heard two bills that proponents said would provide more low-cost housing for Nebraskans with lower and moderate incomes.

Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich offered LB159, which would allow nonprofit organizations to establish private housing authorities.

The other, the committee's LB476, would establish an independent State Mortgage Finance Fund. It would issue revenue bonds to provide lower interest loans through lending institutions to qualified people.

The committee held both bills.

Several attorneys and investment bankers supported LB476. John Wagner, an attorney in the Omaha firm that helped draft the bill, said the fund would issue revenue bonds, the proceeds from which would provide money for two possible programs.

The fund could buy old mortgages from lending institutions which then would have to lend money from the sales at lower rates, estimated at 1 to 3% less than the going rate.

The fund also could lend money directly to financial institutions to make mortgage loans at the lower rates.

Proponents said the plan would be a boon to the construction industry and, although it provides revenue bond tax shelters, probably would increase property tax rolls.

Wagner said the state would not be responsible for the fund's solvency; that would fall upon the investors.

He said the law would apply only to first mortgages, but it probably is broad enough to allow loans to rehabilitate older homes.

Goodrich's bill drew support from Carol Elrod of the United Indians of Nebraska. She said public housing authorities are not meeting the needs of Indians.

The problem is most severe in western Nebraska, she said, where renters discriminate against Indians.

"Everybody wants Indians off the reservations," she said, "but when they leave they can't find places to live."

Limitations statute said applicable

Associated Press
Persons covered by the workmen's compensation act have a responsibility to be familiar enough with the law to know when they are entitled to file a claim, the Nebraska Supreme Court said Wednesday.

On a 6-1 vote, the court reversed and dismissed damages awarded to Donald Novak by the Workmen's Compensation Court and the Douglas County District Court. His injuries were sustained while working for the Triangle Steel Co.

The court majority said the statute of limitations, which requires injuries to be reported within one year of occurrence, barred any award to Novak.

The lower courts had agreed with Novak's contention that the statute of limitations had not run out because he didn't know he had suffered a new compensable injury.

Novak was first injured in November of 1972, and had back surgery that year. He was compensated for that injury.

He hurt himself again in October of 1973 and in January of 1974, had more back surgery. Novak assumed the second surgery stemmed from the first injury, and didn't learn that a new injury was involved until November of 1974. The lower courts had held the statute of limitations had not run out because Novak didn't know he had a second compensable injury.

In other action the Supreme Court:

—Upheld the Hamilton County District Court in a land case involving Lawrence Traut and the Nebraska Public Power District. The court rejected Traut's arguments that through a spoken agreement with NPPD, he was entitled to more money for an easement.

—Remanded to Madison County District Court a child custody case involving Susan and Alvin Brandt.

—Affirmed the Antelope County District Court in a false arrest case brought by Sherman Huskinson against Lambert Venderheiden and Fibert Industries Inc.

—Affirmed the Morrill County District Court in a wheat ownership dispute involving Schuler-Olsen Ranches Inc. and Margaret Garvin.

—Affirmed the Cheyenne County District Court in a mechanic's lien case involving Howard Borsali and Kristina Sierrett.

—Affirmed the Lancaster County District Court's conviction of Alex Horn for discharging a firearm within the city limits.

—Affirmed the Dodge County District Court in dismissing a case centering on street pavement in North Bend, in a case involving Lawrence Gaughen and Edward Sloup.

—Affirmed the Holt County District Court in a promissory note dispute involving Gil Grady and Donald Denbeck.

—Affirmed the Hall County District Court in a divorce case involving Joy and William Schner.

—Affirmed the Douglas County District Court in a robbery sentence of Debra Koford.

Officials discount parking fine ruling

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer
City officials were shrugging their shoulders and saying, "so what?" in the wake of an attorney general's opinion that "administrative costs" cannot be deducted by the city from parking fines.
Assistant City Attorney Bill Austin said Wednesday that he doesn't think the opinion issued at the request of State Sen. John DeCamp would have any effect on Lincoln's procedures.
Currently 95 cents is deducted from each ticket fine processed by the Municipal Court Violations Bureau. The remainder goes to the schools.
Last year $152,936.70 went into the city's general tax fund from this source, and The Lincoln Public Schools received $80,219.30.

While city officials pooh-poohed the opinion, DeCamp claimed it was explosive.
"Not only does it mean cities are illegally keeping the money, but I believe they must also pay back every cent they kept in the past," DeCamp said.
According to the state constitution, parking fine revenue must be turned over to the public schools. Apparently the provision was adopted to discourage cities from viewing parking laws as a means to raise revenue.
Austin said, however, that the 95 cents kept by the city pays for court costs, and he said the opinion did not address itself to court costs.

Austin noted that court costs are also assessed in other types of cases. From a speeding fine, for example, 95 goes into the city's general tax fund, 51 into the judges' retirement fund and 51 into the law enforcement improvement fund, he said.
Although the $152,936.70 collected from parking fines is not specifically earmarked for costs of enforcing and adjudicating those laws, it is one of the sources of revenue used to pay this year's $948,000 Municipal Court budget.
For many years public schools received nothing from parking fines despite the state constitution, according to Robert Den Hartog, associate superintendent for business affairs for the Lincoln Public Schools.

Den Hartog said that it was not until the mid-1960s that the schools began receiving a nickel from every $1 parking fine. That practice apparently resulted from a lawsuit.
Omaha City officials were adopting much the same attitude as Lincoln officials, according to the Associated Press.
Omaha City Attorney Herb Fittle said that for parking fines levied there, $1 goes to schools and $2 is collected for court costs.
DeCamp, however, is contending that even bigger issues are raised by the attorney general's opinion. If all parking fines go to schools, he said, the formula used to compute state aid to education may be thrown out of whack.

Sheriff Merle Karnopp ... considers eighth term.

Karnopp giving election 'considerable thought'

Despite a statement three years ago that he would not seek re-election, Lancaster County Sheriff Merle Karnopp now says he might run for an eighth term.
"The people in my department and my supporters over the years are all urging me to run again, and I'm giving it considerable thought," Karnopp said Wednesday.
After his last victory three years ago Karnopp said, "There is no question that this is my last and final term."
But the 67-year-old sheriff says he may change his mind. "It's not unusual for someone in public office to do that," he said.
Karnopp, who was first elected county sheriff in 1950, said he will make a final decision on the election between now and this fall. His present term ends in May, 1978.

Land price for Copples record high

Developer Newt Cople of Lincoln may have paid a record price for the land on which he wants to build a shopping center in south Lincoln.
Officials in the Lancaster County register of deeds office said the $7,500 an acre paid by Cople is the highest price they can remember for similar land.
Cople and his father, S.E. Cople, purchased 320 acres between 27th and 40th Streets, south of Old Cheney Road for $2.4 million from Stephen R. Yarnell and others.
The purchase occurred Oct. 26, 1976, although the documents were not filed until this week. The Copples already sold half the land to R.J.S. partnership for $1.2 million.
The Partnership of Robert J. Rentfro, 2646 Woodcrest Ave., Jerry Joyce, 1300 Aldrich Road and State Securities, 1330 N St., was formed for land purchase and subdivision, according to records in the county clerk's office.

Man resists extradition to murder trial

Former Lincoln resident Kenneth Paul Morrison Wednesday continued to fight his extradition to Colorado to face a first degree murder charge.
Morrison, 44, challenged his arrest by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and police in Lincoln by filing a writ in Lancaster County Court. Last month, he pleaded innocent to being a fugitive from justice.
Morrison had eluded for more than a year Colorado authorities who have charged him with killing a man on Nov. 11, 1975, in the hills outside Denver. Authorities have said the slaying appears to have been a "contract killing."
Unless Morrison waives extradition to Colorado, the legal proceedings could take months. Another hearing will be March 16.

Lincoln named Tree City USA

Lincoln is among 42 cities and towns in the nation that have been designated Tree City USA communities for 1976.
To qualify, a community must have laws on urban tree management, a tree commission, an urban forestry program supported by public funds and it must conduct formal Arbor Day ceremonies.
The award is presented by the National Arbor Day Foundation in cooperation with the U.S. Forest Service.

Police arrest two men

Lincoln police Wednesday arrested two men for burglarizing Car Parts, Inc., 1905 O St.
Police said the pair was arrested inside the business while the burglary was in progress.
The men are expected to be arraigned Thursday on burglary charges in Lancaster County Court.

Newt grapples again

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

One way or another, Newt Copple has been wrestling for most of his 56 years.

Often it has been the athletic wrestling mat, where he competed more than once in international competition. Sometimes it has been the arena of local government.

Right now he's fighting in court. His opponents are the local politicians who refused to approve his request for a shopping center at 40th and Old Cheney in the new Comprehensive Plan.

Some people might walk away from the fight, despite the million-dollar profits that presumably will fall to the developer of a large shopping center. After all, the City Council voted 6-1 against his shopping center site.

But not Copple. He's been going to the mat for years and loves it.

Six times he was a national wrestling champion at 147.4 pounds. The years he won the title were 1948-52-53-55-58-59.

He won his last national title at the age of 39. That was also the year he toured Russia as one of the "boys" on the United States wrestling team.

Now white-haired at 56, with a leathery, furrowed face, he still runs and lifts weights regularly.

And sometimes, when he tries to make a point in an interview in his office at 620 N. 48th St., the movements of his shoulders, arms and square, powerful hands resemble wrestling feints.

Some people might argue that Copple likes to wrestle for the mere sake of wrestling, not necessarily to win. The argument might be particularly persuasive when looking at Copple's bouts in local government.

In 1967 he won approval for a 36-acre shopping center at 52nd and R, despite the fact that the existing Comprehensive Plan did not authorize it. The shopping center has never materialized.

In 1969 Copple won a zone change that would allow him to build a high-rise apartment at 52nd and R. That apartment was never built.

Copple has reasons why he did not carry through on the plans, and he tries to shift the blame to the city.

In the case of the shopping center, he says, the city made him agree not to open any retail space until 1971, four years later. And then, he said, the city would not permit him to open enough space to make the center succeed.

"Today you need 400,000 square feet, because you need two department stores, which alone take about 200,000. The department stores won't pay enough and you need the rest of the space for small shops, which in effect subsidize the department stores," he said.

According to Copple, protective covenants to which he was forced to agree limited him to 130,000 square feet in 1971. Two years later, he would have been permitted another 120,000 and two years later, another 90,000.

In the case of the high-rise, Copple said, the delay of getting the zoning change resulted in a change in interest rates which meant the project was no longer economically justifiable.

But a pattern in which his plans don't seem to materialize extends even farther back. In 1962 he announced a $200,000 (at that year's prices) shopping square at 500 N. 48th St. It was never built.

Newt Copple is putting up office building with drive-in basement parking.

Ironically, Copple's architect for that precast concrete and glass project was Steve Cook, the councilman whose shopping center site recently was selected over Copple's.

Copple doesn't seem bothered by his record. Better nothing than something bad, he says. "At least I haven't screwed up my development. I still have my raw land and it's in the middle of the city," he said.

After the passage of years, however, there are signs of business life on his "raw land." He's now building a 30,000 square-foot office building with a three-story atrium at 303 N. 52nd St. on land zoned for the shopping center.

Meanwhile, he continues his court battle. It's been 21 years since he last made headlines in that arena. At the time he was a used car dealer, an occupation he pursued for about 15 years.

He organized a promotional stunt in which "Count" Gerald Davis was purportedly trying to break a flagpole sitting record by staying aloft 40 days in a small shed on top of a light pole at Copple's car lot.

His car dealer competitors were upset by this ploy and complained to authorities. Misdemeanor charges were eventually filed and Copple was fined $100 for promoting a physical and mental endurance performance.

It was quite a ruckus, Copple recalls. His competitors even threatened to burn down the pole. As he remembers that particular squabble he breaks into a delighted laugh.

Woman looking for pantyhose which will fit her big behind

DEAR ABBY: What's my problem? Well, to put it honestly, I have a kang-sized behind. I'm not really fat, but heavy thighs and big behinds run in my family.

I would love to find a brand of pantyhose to fit me, but there just aren't any. I've tried the stretch kind, which fits my legs perfectly, but when I try to pull them up over my rear, they don't even begin to reach my waist. I've bought the tall-girl size, even though I'm only 5 foot 3, but they don't work either.

I'm sure there are plenty of other women with the same problem, so you'd be doing us all a tremendous favor if you got the pantyhose manufacturers to design something especially for us well-reared women. They would sell like hotcakes.

WELL-REARED IN R.I.

DEAR WELL-REARED: Unless someone was putting me on, I heard that there is a pantyhose on the market for women with your problem, and it's supposedly named "Fat Fannie Pantyhose." Send me your name and a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and I'll have it checked out by the time this hits print.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's business associate ("Mr. X") recently lost his wife after a marriage of nearly 40 years, so we telephoned him (he lives in New York) and invited him to our little winter home in Palm Springs, Calif., to rest up and get over his grief. Mr. X said he would love to come for a few weeks.

About 10 minutes later he called back asking if he could bring his "girlfriend." Abby, we were shocked! My husband said, "But we have only one guest room." Mr. X said, "That's O.K., I want to see how this old gal looks in the morning before she puts her face on."

With that, he hung up, so now we are trapped. We certainly don't want that kind of setup here, but what can we do?

TRAPPED IN PALM SPRINGS

DEAR TRAPPED: Call Mr. X before he heads West and tell him that the invitation was for him alone. And if he has in mind auditioning "new talent" while he recovers from his grief, he'll have to find a friend with a larger home.

DEAR ABBY: I read your column every day and notice that you sometimes put in a good word for a worthy cause. I pray that this makes your column.

I work for the city's animal shelter, and have had it up to here.

After five years of participating in the destruction of lovable, healthy, bright-eyed puppies and kittens, I'm about to lose my marbles.

Abby, please beg your readers to have their pets spayed or neutered. If not for the sake of all living creatures, for the sake of the people who have to do this damn job!

SICKENED IN L.A.

DEAR SICKENED: Consider this a plea for a most worthy cause. (P.S. But how much "sicker" must you become before you seek other employment?)

DEAR ABBY: I am a directory assistance operator in Pittsburgh, and until I started working for Bell Telephone I didn't know there were so many rude, inconsiderate and thoughtless people in the world.

In the first place, wouldn't you think a person who wants to have a telephone number would have sense enough to have a pencil in his hand when he calls? No way. They call us FIRST, and then ask us to wait until they find a pencil.

Also when we ask them how to spell a name, they will say, "If I knew how to spell it, I'd find it myself!"

When we do find a number, they say, "Thank you?" No, they just slam down the receiver!

One more thing, Abby. Will you please ask adults NOT to ask their very young children to call for them? One thing that drives a telephone operator up a wall is a kid who cannot be heard or understood.

Even if this doesn't make your column, it did me a lot of good just to be able to get this off my chest.

PITTSBURGH OPERATOR

DEAR OPERATOR: Glad to oblige. It's time someone gave a little recognition to that vast faceless army of unmentioned heroes and heroines.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69790, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 122 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (36c) envelope.

partner leads the queen of clubs. You win with the ace and the question is what to play at trick two.

When the hand was played, East returned the five of clubs. South won with the king and led a diamond towards dummy at trick three. West followed low, hoping declarer would misguess and play the jack from dummy. But South went up with the king and wound up making four hearts. He lost a spade, a heart and a club.

East berated his partner severely for not climbing up with the ace when the diamond was led. West defended himself by contending that South might have held two diamonds instead of only one, in which case rushing up with the ace would have handed declarer the contract.

Actually, East was at least as much at fault as West. East could see three sure defensive tricks in his hand, and his only hope was to find West with one trick. East was in a position to realize that the contract could be defeated if West held the king of spades, ace of hearts or ace of diamonds, and he should therefore have led a diamond at trick two to head off a possible mistake by West.

The diamond return by East could do no harm if South had the ace, but could do lots of good if West had the ace.

The secret of good defensive play lies not only in avoiding mistakes yourself, but also in arranging the play so as to minimize the chance of your partner making a mistake. Good defense is often a matter of close partnership cooperation, and the diamond return at trick two is clearly a sound step in this direction.

Smoke detector vital investment

By Joanne Farris

Did you know that home fires kill 12,000 persons every year and injure more than 300,000. Each year there are over 4 million residential fires, and their cost runs over $4 billion.

Richard Strother, associate director of the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration is not alone in believing that "A single smoke detector will dramatically increase home safety." Unigard Insurance Group is so convinced of the value of these devices that they offer a 2% reduction on the home fire policy of any household who installs approved smoke detectors.

Fire departments in Seattle and elsewhere believe many house fire fatalities, as many as 40%, can be prevented if smoke detectors are installed in most homes, because from 50 to 75% of fire deaths result from smoke inhalation.

What is a smoke detector? It's a dependable device that gives an early warning whenever there's smoke in your home, alerting you by its loud noise to the possibility of fire. The detector "smells" smoke before it becomes a life-threatening hazard, and its alarm sounds continuously for up to a week!

Ten states have mandated smoke detectors for new homes, rental units, and mobile homes, and nearly two dozen more have such laws on their docket. Fire safety experts would like to see the requirement extended to older homes, where the need may be even greater.

There are at least 18 brands of smoke detection devices on the market, but there are only two basic kinds of detectors sold for home use: "photoelectric" and "ionization" detectors, named according to the method used to detect smoke. Either kind is suitable for warning of fire; each includes a horn loud enough to disturb the soundest sleeper.

Photoelectric detectors use household electric current. They have a tendency to become less sensitive with age. Their light source, which triggers the alarm when smoke particles are reflected by it against a photoelectric cell, burns out and must be replaced in 3 to 5 years.

Ion detectors can use either household current or batteries. These detectors become more sensitive over time, and therefore they tend to false alarm more often as they age. Batteries require yearly replacement.

Aside from these differences, smoke detectors vary little in appearance or price, but there are significant differences in quality. The National Fire Prevention and Control Administration recommends that purchasers look for alarms certified by a national testing organization; look for an alarm that does not malfunction, does not false alarm, and does not require much maintenance. A good alarm should offer a means to test it to insure its proper functioning.

The detector should be located near the sleeping area of the home. If yours is a multi-story house you need a detector at the top of the basement stairs, in addition to one near sleeping areas. The best position is on the ceiling or on the wall 6 to 12 inches below the ceiling.

A smoke detector will awaken you in time to escape, but every family should have escape routes planned and known by all family members. There should be two exits from every bedroom, and fire drills are recommended.

San Francisco — It wasn't what you'd call a flood, but at least the sidewalks were wet this morning. No green grass yet at Sinking Inn. ("Low down payment. Pay forever.")

Come flood, feast or famine, Uncle Sugar wants his yearly cut.

"Depreciation (explain in Schedule C-2)." You should look in the Blue Book for my depreciation. If you tried to trade me in, the dealer would laugh in your face.

Some pistons are not seating properly. I grind to a start slowly on cold mornings.

But can I deduct this depreciation? (Deterioration is a closer word for it.)

Oh no, says Big Brother looking over my shoulder.

Typewriters depreciate. Tape recorders grow older and clatter.

But no relief for the depreciating taxpayer. Stuck together with rubber bands. Baling wire and cheap cooking sherry.

Well, as the girls say in Tijuana — (I guess they won't say it here after all. This being a family newspaper.)

Families have changed though. If you really want to read the stuff that sent "Hustler's" publisher to stony lonesome, you find it on the Women's Page.

Man, when women liberated themselves, they really left the launching pad! We were under heavy wraps when I was scouring active verbs.

But nobody touches the activity written by chicks who put the Women's Pages together.

"Other income (explain)." What does the federal bagman mean by that?

The thing about income is there's never enough. So how could there be "other income"? Other than what?

Been working on "other income" for years. There was a fortune to be made a few years ago for anyone who could invent a backless bra.

Seems all women wanted their superstructures uplifted. But they didn't want the working gear to show in the back. This was something like trying to saddle a horse without using a cinch.

Now you can't even sell an uplift garment. Nobody wears them — as any fool can see if he keeps his eyes open on Union Street.

Too bad because I just about had that one invented. It was like iron-on tape. You ironed the bra on the muffin. What held me up was how to keep a cool iron. I didn't want to brand the girl. Just lift up her spirits, as you might say.

The moppets rise at dawn's early light. Moaning and groaning. "Don't use the shower more than half a minute, you pig!" "Shut up!"

However, they recover speedily. A little fruit juice. A jolt of toast and honey. A bowl of "Special K".

This shows they are not depreciating at all. Not a crying dime for myself. A second-hand rose. With most of his thorns blunted by life.

Chinese serious conservationists

By R. Littleton

An average American trash can is filled with leftover food, worn out household devices and discarded containers. American cities customarily treat their sewage and then get rid of it as quickly as possible.

In contrast, the Chinese compost almost all food and plant leftovers, process their sewage into fertilizer and re-use goods indefinitely — according to Dr. Virgil Johnson, who works here in Lincoln for the Agricultural Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and Dr. Robert Olson, a professor in agronomy at UNL's East Campus. Both men were on a month-long trip to China, just this past summer, to study Chinese agriculture.

Through these and other conservation methods, the Chinese have been able to utilize moderate natural resource supplies to support one of the largest populations on the face of the earth.

Johnson experienced this attitude of conservation directly when he tried to throw away a worn-out toothbrush. He dropped it into a wastepaper basket in his room at one of the many stops the team made. But before he could depart for the next stop, his old toothbrush had been retrieved by the hotel personnel and returned to him. He was unable to convince his hosts that the toothbrush was worn out because it still had bristles.

At the next hotel stop, Johnson once more threw away the retired toothbrush. But when it was again returned, he realized that this could continue all across China because the people at each stop would think the toothbrush was forgotten, not discarded.

But this difference between the American and Chinese view of conservation shows up in more significant ways throughout that oriental society, especially in relation to agriculture.

Besides the composting and sewage processing already mentioned, the Chinese have reclaimed hundreds of thousands of acres of previously unusable land and irrigated most of it.

Probably the most remarkable example of agricultural conservation is what is known as "inter-cropping." Through this method, whereby two or more crops are planted in alternative strips in one field, the Chinese have been able to literally harvest two and a half to four crops per growing season (which is comparable to a North American growing season) from the same field to greatly increase total production from the field each year.

So now, in contrast to the situation in the last hundred years when the western powers used to have strong influence in that country, China has an adequate food supply.

Another thing both Johnson and Olson noticed on their trip was China's effort at full material independence. The goal for collectives and local communities is to become self-sufficient in all food supplies, light industrial needs and most of the heavy industrial requirements.

"When this goal is fully accomplished," says Johnson, "China will become the most 'un-vulnerable' country in the world simply because the population won't have to depend on a few centers for its needs." Militarily, it would seem to be significant.

Overall, the trip was refreshing for two Nebraskans. They were impressed by the industriousness and cleanliness of the Chinese and by their dynamic spirit of nationalism. But both men were glad to return to America where people live as individuals and try to make their own lives according to their own ideas.

New tax law worth studying

New York — You can't do your income tax by getting out last year's returns and following the same form. The new tax law made a lot of changes — many of them to your advantage. Unfortunately, people sometimes forget to claim new tax breaks that they're not used to receiving. Here are some of the provisions to watch for, according to Joseph M. Lobel with the international accounting firm, Coopers & Lybrand.

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

(1) Every taxpayer is allowed a new "credit" against taxes. (A tax credit is a straight reduction of the amount of tax you owe.) You're allowed to take $35 off your taxes for yourself and each dependent, OR 2% of your first $9,000 of taxable income ($180), whichever is larger. Under this formula, the majority of taxpayers will get a credit of at least $180. If you have six or more personal exemptions, you'll get more than $180.

(2) Anyone with a taxable income up to $20,000 will now use the tax table to figure his tax, rather than having to make a series of calculations. Formerly, the tax table stopped at $15,000, and applied to adjusted gross income rather than taxable income.

(3) If you didn't qualify for the child-care deduction last year, look again. Many of the restrictions have been lifted. You're now entitled to this tax break if you have to pay for the care of a child under 15, at home or in a day-care center or nursery school, hold a full or part-time job or go to school full time. It applies to divorced or legally separated parents who have custody of a child, as well as to working couples. There's no longer an income restriction — even the wealthy qualify.

The babysitter can be a relative, even one who lives with you, as long as it's a bona fide job covered by Social Security. So be sure to make the Social Security payments. The tax break will be disallowed, however, if the babysitter is your dependent.

The old child-care tax break took the form of an itemized deduction, which meant it couldn't be used by people who took the standard deduction. But this year it's a direct credit against taxes, available to everyone who qualifies. The credit amounts to 20% of employment-related expenses up to a maximum credit of $400 for one child and $800 for two or more. To take the credit, married couples must file a joint return.

Warning: You can't take the credit on form 1040A. If you file that form just because you always have, you'll miss out on what could be a major tax break. File form 1040 and attached form 2441, which is included in the 1040 package.

(4) You also get a tax credit if, in order to hold a job or go to school, you have to hire someone to take care of an ailing spouse, elderly parent, disabled child 15 or over, or any other dependent who is incapable of self-care. The credit is 20% of in-home expenses, up to a maximum credit of $400. This credit is also taken on forms 1040 and 2441.

(5) The tax law increased the amount of moving expenses deductible when you change jobs, but the change applies only from 1977 on. For 1976, the old limitations still apply — $2,500 maximum, with house-hunting and temporary living expenses limited to $1,000 of that total. However, a number of changes in the moving allowance for military personnel go into effect this year. Moving expenses are deductible whether you itemize or take the standard deduction.

(6) If you've been excluding $100 a week of sick pay or disability pay on past tax returns, don't expect to do it again. The exclusion now applies only if you're under 65 and totally and permanently disabled.

(7) You can still deduct expenses for your office at home as long as it's exclusively used on a regular basis as your principal place of business where you normally meet clients, customers and patients. The room must be an office only — it can't double as the family TV room. The deduction can't exceed the amount of income the office produces. So you can't use a little bit of free-lance or consulting income as an excuse to take a big deduction from your regular income.

(8) If you have a second home or condominium, you still get the full tax deduction for mortgage interest and property taxes. But you can no longer deduct all the maintenance and depreciation costs just because the house is rented out for part of the season.

The people who use a vacation home for more than two weeks or more than 10% of the time it's actually rented, whichever is greater, are limited as to the amount of expenses (other than interest and taxes) they can deduct. At most, those expenses can't exceed the rental income. If you use the house for a shorter period, the deduction may be larger, but other restrictions may apply.

'Please don't...'

Tallahassee, Fla. (AP) — Officials at Tallahassee Community College are scratching their heads over a series of thefts in the past five months — someone is stealing toilet paper.

But college officials aren't laughing. They say the thefts of eight rolls at a time have reached about 400 rolls a month and over a five-month period has meant a loss of $400.

To combat the thefts, school officials put a plea in the campus newsletter asking for help.

One school official said, "It's beyond me how someone can walk out of a restroom with eight rolls of toilet paper and not be noticed."

'Hairy James' toots horn

San Francisco (UPI) — King Kong he isn't. This is one ape who'd rather play the trumpet at Fisherman's Wharf.

His nickname is "Hairy James," and in just eight months in town Brian Weber has become a San Francisco attraction by tootling on the horn in his gorilla suit.

"Tourists see a gorilla playing a trumpet and they say, 'See, This is wild, colorful San Francisco,'" said Weber, 22, a native of Los Angeles.

Weber draws his biggest audiences when, wearing his thick furry gorilla suit, a beret and dark glasses, and holding a banana in one hand, he plays sweet romantic ballads — "what the public prefers."

"People sing with me, dance with me, smile with me," said Weber, who also performs in front of the downtown Geary and Curran Theaters. "One night a folk dance troupe going to the theater together put on a street show."

Weber came here last July seeking work as a musician and made friends with a gorilla-costumed accordionist, which prompted him to get his own hairy outfit and start blowing.

The gorilla image now has taken over part of his personality, he said. When he puts on the costume, "my personality changes, I become looser, more assertive, and my movements more exaggerated."

"I seem to do what a gorilla would do, and the kids especially love it. I have a little fan club, the Gorilla Society. You can join if you promise to monkey around a lot. One of our songs is 'Gorillas in the Night.'"

Weber says he has made San Francisco "a happier place." He performed outside the opening of the movie "King Kong" here, he gets dinner invitations, and "I think I must appear in every tourist's San Francisco photos."

Coffee price up again

United Press International

General Foods Corp., the nation's largest coffee roaster, Wednesday boosted wholesale prices on ground coffee by 40 cents to a record $3.71 a pound and raised the list price of soluble brands from 10 to 18 cents an ounce.

The action, effective immediately, marked the third increase on General Foods' ground coffee within 30 days.

The company last raised prices on its soluble coffees Dec. 16.

In White Plains, N.Y., a General Foods spokesman attributed the latest price hike to a 300% rise in the average price of green beans since a frost destroyed 73.5% of Brazil's 1976 coffee crop. Brazil, the world's largest coffee producer, supplies 60% of all U.S. coffee imports.

Before the frost, a one-pound can of ground coffee retailed for $1.27, and prices now are hovering at $3 in most U.S. supermarkets.

The General Foods move to $3.71 a pound eclipsed Folger Coffee Co.'s wholesale list price of $3.68 a pound, which had been the highest in the nation. Folger, the second largest roaster, lifted prices by 40 cents to the $3.68 mark last Friday.

Space team hopes to sail craft to Halley's Comet

By John Noble Wilford
(c) New York Times

New York — People used to view the appearance of a great comet, particularly Halley's, with fear and trembling. In 1910, during the last apparition of Halley's Comet, patent medicine hawkers enriched themselves selling "comet pills" to ward off any evil influences "of the dreaded star."

Now, with Halley's Comet due to return in 1986, the reception should be less superstitious and more scientific — but in its own way as spectacular as the brilliant comet itself.

American space engineers are busy devising plans to dispatch a spacecraft on a mission to rendezvous with Halley's Comet and explore the nature of its mysterious nucleus and vaporous tail.

Their most intriguing concept for the mission is an application of the ancient technology of sailing to spaceflight.

For, as anyone but a confirmed Earth-lubber knows, sunlight exerts pressure in the form of photons, which are massless particles. When photons are reflected off a surface, they create a force much as wind against a sail. Indeed, even sailless spacecraft can be blown off course by sunlight pressure. On a long journey, to Mars, say, a spacecraft must be aimed several hundred miles off target and wait for sunlight to right its course.

An engineering team at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., is studying several designs for a solar sailing ship.

The sail would be squarish and measure about half a mile on a side, resembling a giant kite. It would be made of a thin plastic, as thin as Saran Wrap, coated with aluminum to create a highly reflective surface and capable of withstanding temperatures of at least 800 degrees Fahrenheit for a long duration.

When deployed in space, the sail would be supported by light-weight metal spars and masts. At the center where the diagonal masts cross, a spacecraft would be attached. All the cameras and instruments for examining the comet, or for any other exploratory task, would be housed in the 1,800-pound spacecraft.

Norman R. Haynes, manager of advanced programs development at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, said in an interview recently that tests were under way to determine the most suitable plastic for the sail, one that could not only endure high temperatures but also be strong enough to be folded and unfolded without tearing. A leading candidate is Kapton, which was developed by DuPont.

Another problem under study is how to keep the sail pointing in the right direction — how, that is, to tack against or with the solar photon stream. Engineers believe this can be done with small sails attached like vanes at the four tips of the sail. By changing the settings of the vanes, Haynes said, it should be possible to steer the sail.

To keep its rendezvous with Halley's Comet, Haynes said, the solar sailing ship would have to embark in late 1981 and along the way go through "some celestial gymnastics." The problem is that Halley's Comet is a high-velocity object with an orbit in the opposite direction from Earth's.

According to current planning, the vehicle would be deployed from the space shuttle, the reusable cargo ship under development, at an altitude of about 500 miles. From there, with the sail unfurled, it would head in toward the sun at a speed of perhaps as much as 35,000 miles an hour.

When the craft gets about two-thirds of the distance in to the sun, automatic controls would tilt the sail and head the vehicle into a spiraling orbit that would eventually move it over the top of the sun. This is called a "cranking orbit."

The result, after a year of "cranking," would be to put the craft on a new trajectory going around the sun in the opposite direction. It would then make one long loop to come alongside the comet soon after its closest approach to the sun in February 1986.

At rendezvous the sail would be jettisoned, leaving the spacecraft and transmit data for a year. A committee of scientists is selecting the appropriate instruments for learning the most about a comet. An attempt would probably be made to collect and analyze dust particles from the comet.

Haynes acknowledged that solar sailing is a new-old idea. It was theorized in the 1920s by Konstantin Tsiolkovsky, the Russian prophet of astronautics, and found its way into science fiction. In a 1973 study for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Battelle Memorial Institute established the feasibility and also pointed out the opportunity of a spacecraft rendezvous with Halley's Comet using such a solar sail.

But in case the concept appears to be too difficult to master in time for the comet rendezvous, the NASA engineers are looking at an alternative system that also involves a new spaceflight technology.

This is solar electric propulsion — or, as they call it at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, "ion drive." This system uses solar cells to convert sunlight into electricity, which, in turn, is used to vaporize a mercury propellant into its individual atoms. This is called ionization. The ionized atoms are accelerated and discharged as exhaust, which provides thrust.

Kenneth L. Atkins, who is working on the laboratory's ion drive team, said the solar-electric method would be a simpler way of reaching Halley's Comet. The plan would be to fly the vehicle out toward Jupiter, make a powered U-turn and speed back toward the sun, "essentially already in Halley's orbit and awaiting the comet's overtaking."

A choice between the two systems, ion drive and solar sailing, is expected to be made in August or September.

Surprised burglar kills utility employees

Roseville, Calif. (UPI) — Two utility company employees — a man and a woman — visiting homes in an exclusive area to warn residents of a planned power outage were shot dead Wednesday when they apparently surprised a burglar in one of the homes.

A house-to-house search by 40 police, deputies and California Highway Patrol officers failed to turn up the killer in the rural residential neighborhood near Folsom Lake.

The bodies of the employees of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. were in a four-wheel-drive company vehicle outside a ranch-style house that had been ransacked and burglarized.

The victims were identified as William Harrington, 55, of Auburn, an electrical line patrolman since 1961, and Carla Burkart, 28, of Citrus Heights, the mother of two and a PG&E employee for one month.

Placer County Sheriff William Scott said Harrington and Mrs. Burkart both were shot in the head at close range by a high-powered weapon, apparently as they tried to escape from a burglar in the house owned by Wesley Williams, a developer.

Capt. Donald Nunes, of the sheriff's department, told reporters, "We have little or no leads on the situation at this time."

When truth won't work, try films as a defense

Mount Pleasant, Mich. (AP) — William Porter found himself badly in need of a stratagem. Wrongly accused of armed robbery, he'd been home alone watching TV at the time. But that's not a convincing alibi.

Several family members backed up parts of his story, but they couldn't testify they were with him during the hour in question.

So in court on Monday, Porter related in detail the plots of the Dec. 28 segments of "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley." The next day, he produced video tapes of the shows, supplied by the American Broadcasting Co., and he showed them for the Isabella County Circuit Court jury. The defense rested.

Reynolds Campbell, Porter's court-appointed attorney, said ABC officials in New York had been very cooperative.

The tactic impressed the jury too. Porter was acquitted.

UNL tells plans for energy office

Plans for a proposed Energy Extension Center at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln have been revealed by UNL officials.

Although a federal agency has begun examining the Cooperative Extension Service as a model in establishing an energy conservation information program, UNL officials hope to set up a center here.

Dr. Roy A. Young, UNL chancellor, said federal Energy Research and Development Administration personnel are considering setting up 10 model extension programs in as many states through their respective governors' offices. He said the program, if proposed, would be developed by a university yet to be selected.

Young said funds for development of a similar program will be requested by Nebraska from the Old West Regional Commission, composed of the governors and their representatives from the five states of North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Montana and Nebraska.

A two-year grant of about $650,000 will be sought from the regional commission to establish the center at UNL for the five states, according to Dr. Donald Edwards, director of the UNL Energy Research Development Center and associate dean of the College of Engineering and Technology.

Edwards, who served as co-director of a six-member state energy task force with George Dworak, director of the state energy office, said the group's final proposal will be ready by the end of this week.

The recommendations of the task force, which was formed on Jan. 15 after a proposal from the governor's Energy Advisory Committee, will be forwarded to the State Department of Planning and Programming before being sent to Gov. J. James Exon for consideration and presentation to the Old West Commission, probably by late this spring or early summer, according to Edwards.

"This type of activity has never been done before in the country," he said Wednesday in an interview. "It's unique because it pulls the best systems of several (extension) delivery systems together in one major effort."

Edwards said the effort would involve the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service, the Division of Continuing Studies and the extension divisions of the College of Engineering and Technology and other colleges at the University, as well as the State Energy Office, the State Department of Economic Development, and community and state colleges.

"The university's one and only role is education," he said, although it may be accomplished through many means. "The state energy office's role is to formulate policy, regulation and promotion. Together, they complement each other."

"We'll (the university and state) need to work hand-in-glove," Edwards added. "It will take more than just the university to get the job done."

He said the requested appropriation from the regional commission's budget, which is allotted by the U.S. Department of the Interior, would be used to add a "skeletal crew" of seven members to the university's staff to man the proposed Energy Extension Center.

Edwards said the proposal was developed after four congressional bills died last summer which would have appropriated about $7.5 million for the establishment of a national Energy Research Center with a "strong extension component."

"We decided not to sit around and anticipate what Washington, D.C., was going to do and said 'let's go ahead,'" he said. "If Washington doesn't act now, we've done all of our homework and can move into our own energy conservation information program."

Frank E. Henzlik
... dies in Florida.

F. Henzlik, former NU dean, dies

Frank E. Henzlik, dean of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Teachers College from 1931 to 1958, died Tuesday night in Coral Gables, Fla. He was 83.

A memorial service for Henzlik, for whom Henzlik Hall on the university campus is named, will be Friday in Coral Gables. Survivors include his wife, Pearl of Coral Gables.

Henzlik came to UNL in 1924, as professor of school administration, a position he held until appointed dean of Teachers College.

Before coming to Nebraska, he was a teacher and superintendent in schools in Missouri for nine years.

He is well known for his work with education in small communities. He was president of the North Central Association, 1944-46. From 1955-60, he chaired an executive committee studying Nebraska community education.

China offered as farm efficiency model

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

Developing countries needing a model to base an agriculture program on should look at China, an Iowa agricultural consultant said Wednesday.

Roger Blobaum, who works for the government and private clients out of Creston, Iowa, explained China's agricultural system during a world hunger symposium at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

During two trips in 1975 and 1976, Blobaum logged more than 1,800 miles through China's rural and urban areas.

China has developed methods of farming which drastically limits the use of energy, totally recycles wastes between the urban and rural communities and has been able to keep the same land formable for more than 4,000 years.

Some of the methods include multiple and interplanting planting of fields, large irrigation networks, the use of manpower more than machine power and, most importantly, the development of agricultural communes.

Multiple planting involves constantly replanting fields to get two or three crops a year, while interplanting involves planting two or more crops at a time on the same field such as pear trees and cabbage.

The ground is refertilized with combinations of city and rural wastes. Also the farmers annually drain the deep irrigation ditches, scrape off the algae, duck droppings and silted soil and place it on the farmland.

Rural communes are similar to agricultural co-ops in the United States, he said.

"Communes are almost self-sufficient units," he said. "They may even have small factories to manufacture necessary machinery."

With the decentralized farming system, there's no need for a transportation system between the farms and cities outside of railroad trains, he said — another energy savings.

Every way of using any byproduct of some other production method is used, he said. And when something plausible is found, it's put into operation immediately.

Pork is the most valuable meat product in the country, Blobaum explained. The hog waste is used for fertilizer, while the hogs eat garbage and food factory byproducts.

He showed a picture of grape vines covering hog pens. The vines provided shade and the hogs provided fertilizer. The vines also provided a grape crop. Blobaum said there's little chance China will import large amounts of U.S. grain in the next 20 to 25 years.

"If they do buy, it would be from someone else like Canada," he said. "One person told me they had some bad experiences with U.S. grain. They said they want clean grain!"

Of the processes he saw in China, Blobaum said cultural differences wouldn't allow most of them to work in the U.S.

"But I went to see a total recycling process," Blobaum said about the waste process in China. "I think that's something that's going to have to happen here."

Woods Realty wins energy award

One Lincoln realty firm has discovered a rather unique use of a Lincoln Transportation System bus as a means for saving energy.

And for its efforts, the Woods Bros. Realty firm Wednesday was presented an energy award by the Mayor's Energy Committee.

The award was given specifically for the company's use of the city buses for sales staff members on their weekly tours of residences listed "for sale."

And at the same time, the company conserved on parking by not lining in front of homes up to 15 cars needed to handle sales personnel on the weekly tour, according to Pace Woods.

Woods said he has no idea how many gallons of gas may have been saved this first year on the weekly 25 to 50-mile tours which previously involved 10 to 15 cars which normally get any where from eight to 20 miles to the gallon.

In addition to conservation of energy and parking, Woods said use of the buses has resulted in some "spinoff" benefits to the company.

For example, it affords the staff the opportunity for individual sales personnel, in between homes on the tour, to stand up on the bus and present information about his or her particular listings.

Woods said utilizing the chartered bus for the tours has also helped the attrition rate. "We feel an obligation for our sales staff to see every listing," he said.

Faculty to consider equity money

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate may recommend that the $500,000 in equity money for the Omaha campus be dropped from next year's budget request.

A resolution seeking deletion of the equity money will be on the senate's Tuesday afternoon agenda. The $500,000 for UNO was based on a formula comparing financial support to the Lincoln and Omaha campuses.

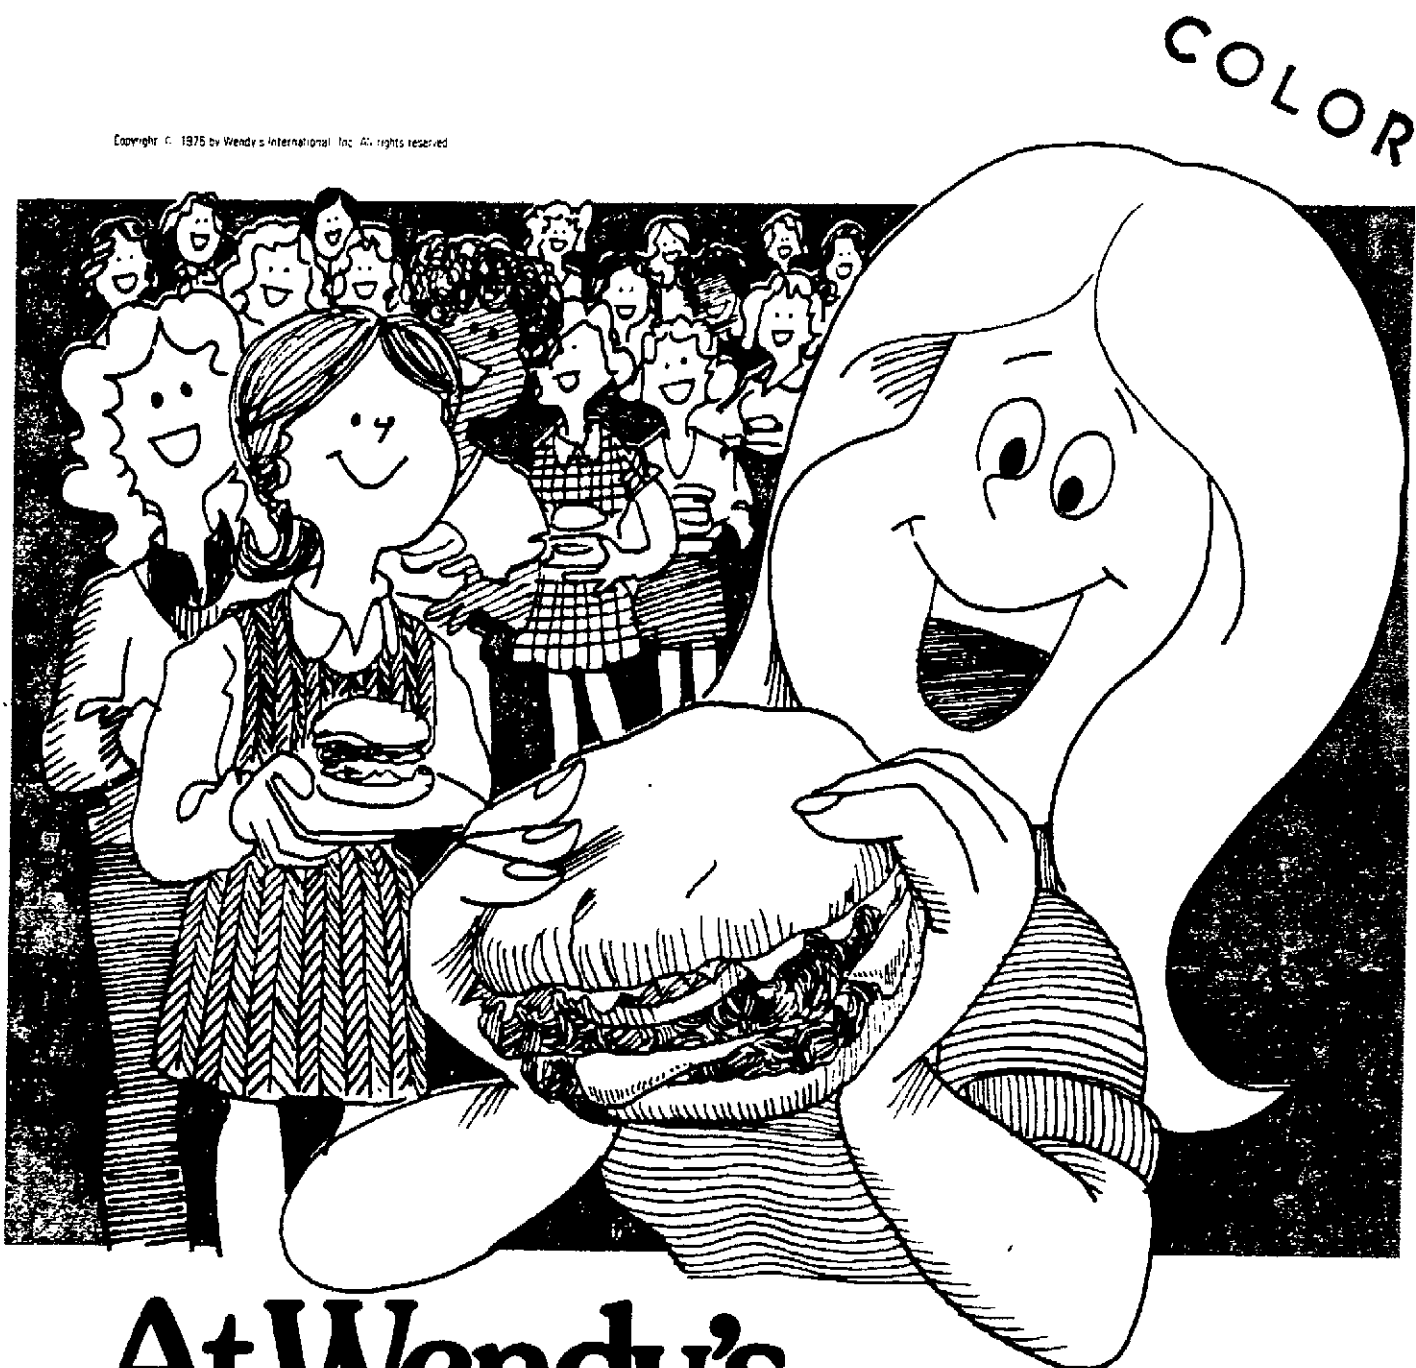

UNL Faculty Senate President Dr. Henry Baumgarten has provided a study showing that the conclusions which led to the equity money are unjustified, according to the resolution.

The resolution also states that there is no unequivocal evidence to support the existence of inequity in support levels between the two campuses and that if any equity does exit, the information provided in Baumgarten's report suggests that UNL, not UNO, is underfunded.

The Faculty Senate will also discuss the faculty's perception of the role of the university systems office.

In other action, the senate will vote on a resolution aimed at setting up a committee to investigate ties between companies providing insurance services to UNL faculty and the campus and systems administrators involved in negotiating insurance programs.

Secretary Blumenthal talks on spending.

Government not spending it all

Washington (AP) — The federal government is underspending its budget again, by $7.5 billion in the last 4 1/2 months, Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal said Wednesday.

Blumenthal said he doesn't think the underspending, which amounted to $4 billion in January alone, will be a setback to the nation's economic growth this year. He forecast a "very nice recovery" of the economy in 1977.

However, a shortfall of about $14 billion in federal spending during 1976 was blamed in part for the slowdown in economic growth during the second half of the year.

Blumenthal told reporters the government may have overestimated the impact of inflation on government spending, including spending by the Defense Department on new weaponry.

He said if it appears that the underspending of the fiscal 1977 budget is having an adverse impact on the economy, then the Carter administration would re-evaluate its policies to see if additional economic stimulus is needed in addition to the $31 billion, two-year economic program Carter has recommended.

But he said he didn't think additional stimulus will be required. He also said the underspending could reduce the 1977 budget deficit below the record $70 billion deficit now estimated for the year.

Except for the economic stimulus package Carter has recommended, the 1977 budget was prepared by the Ford administration and the last Congress.

Meanwhile, Chairman Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve Board said the economy is poised for good growth this year and doesn't need help from Carter's economic stimulus package.

"Efforts at fiscal stimulation do not seem promising to me in these circumstances," he told the House Budget Committee.

County to install warning siren system

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

Installation will begin next week on a $59,419 emergency siren system that will blanket Lancaster County with warning devices.

Sirens will be installed at 20 locations, bringing a siren within earshot of almost every county resident, according to Norm Francis, Emergency Services Coordinator.

Francis explained the siren system Wednesday night at a meeting of the Civil Defense Advisory Council.

The sirens can be activated from Lincoln in case of a county-wide disaster or enemy attack, Francis explained. They also can be used individually to summon volunteer fire departments for a local disaster, and may even be used as "noon whistles" for timekeeping purposes.

New sirens will be added and inadequate ones replaced, he said.

He also described the operation of the planned collocated emergency communications center which will bring law enforcement, fire and ambulance dispatchers together in one room.

Specially-trained operators will answer calls on the all-emergency telephone number "911" and will field the calls to proper departments.

Just before the center goes into operation next fall, Francis said he plans "a publicity blitz" to teach citizens to use 911 for all emergency calls — and only for emergencies.

Hoping for joint federal funding to set up the center, Francis said he believes it will create a "more efficient operation" for all agencies involved.

"We're going to make it fly," he said.

GWS, beet growers announce agreement

Denver (UPI) — Great Western Sugar Co. Wednesday announced agreement with three beet growers associations on a contract covering crops through 1979.

The contract, covering the 1977, 1978 and 1979 sugar beet crops in Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas and Nebraska, was formulated after both sides agreed to a uniform method of sharing freight costs between the company and growers.

A joint announcement also said growers and GWS had negotiated a method of "utilizing diffusion juice purity as an adjustment to the customary sugar beet payment for the three-year period."

"Grower association leaders will be in contact with their members to inform them fully of all details relating to the contract," the statement said. "Points relating to minor operational matters are being resolved."

Representatives of the company and the Mountain States, Nebraska Non-Stock and Big Horn Basin Beet Growers Associations expressed confidence "the basic agreement provides the foundation for a stable, long-term relationship."

Great Western last year attempted to introduce a blanket payment formula based on the purity of beets, but the move was opposed by growers and resulted in creation of a five-member purity committee to test purity of individual grower's beets. Under the new contract, the purity committee will remain in operation.

The company also said it would reassess maintenance requirements at 11 plants placed on maintenance standby earlier and would announce shortly "a date for resumption of customary intercampaign maintenance programs."

GM said suspected of illegal writeoffs

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp. Chairman Thomas A. Murphy Wednesday warned that "success has become a cause for suspicion" of many businesses.

GM is under investigation by the Justice Department and the Internal Revenue Service. Investigators believe the auto industry giant may have made illegal write-offs to purposely understate its income and taxes.

The Wall Street Journal on Wednesday said investigators believe the alleged write-offs may have amounted to almost $500 million.

Tax write-offs are a legal method of covering obsolete or useless items, but IRS agents say a routine audit showed GM may have written off non-existent items or reported some items twice.

No charges have been filed, and GM — one of the country's largest taxpayers — has denied any wrongdoing.

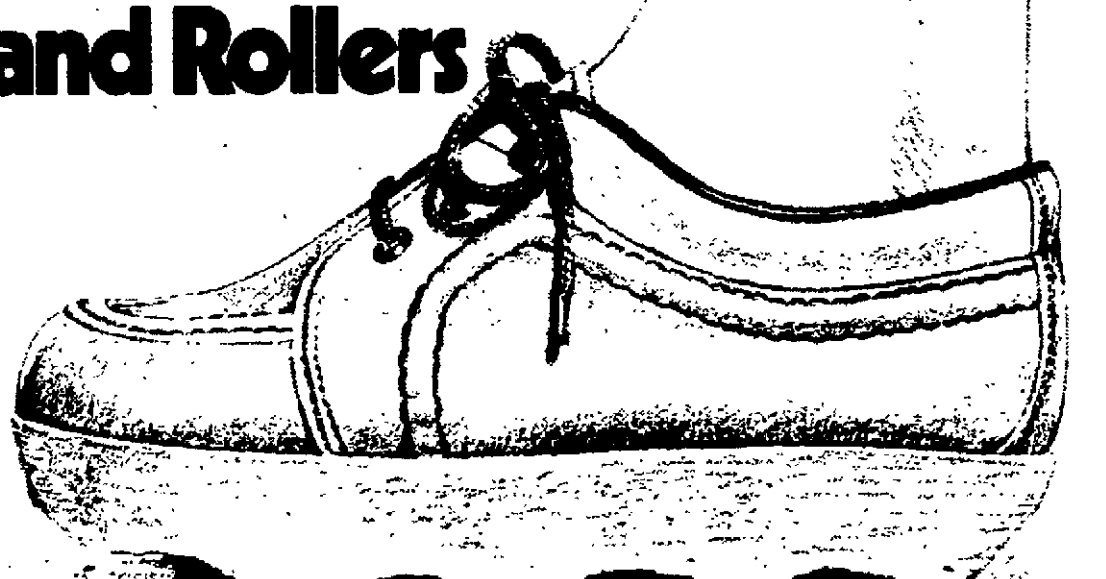

"Success alone is now evidence enough to warrant intensive scrutiny by the government to determine how the success can be remedied — as if it were some sort of disease," Murphy told the Society of Automotive Engineers' convention in Detroit.

"I think there are some people, in and out of government, who get a little confused and associate bigness with badness," Murphy said.

The GM chairman said the investigations are a symptom of governmental suspicion of big business.

New Lincoln police cars to be brighter and louder

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

If, in the next few days, Lincolniters start hearing sirens which sound louder than usual, they won't need their ears checked. They'll be right.

And, if they see a police cruiser scream by them, they won't need their eyes checked, either, because the cars won't be a dreary black and white, but a brilliant blue and white combination.

The sporty new look — and sound — will amount in 33 new Ford LTD II's ordered by the Lincoln Police Department this year from McGinnis Ford.

The new cruisers, which should be patrolling city streets by the end of the week, also sport reflectorized door decals, a redesigned interior and new rotating lights and directional pursuit lights.

The sirens in the new squad cars will be 100 watts, Sgt. Doug Ahlberg said, instead of the 50-watt sirens installed in the old cruisers.

The department ordered the louder sirens to alert motorists of a police car's approach during an emergency, Ahlberg said. Since many of the newer cars are better insulated, many people complained they couldn't hear the sirens until it was too late to pull over to the side of the road to let the squad car pass.

The new colors also should improve the police officer's visibility, Ahlberg said, something he thinks the citizens will like.

Blue, he said, is one of the few colors that people who are color-blind can distinguish from other colors.

Fourteen of the LTD II's will be additions to the police fleet, while 19 will replace the black and white cruisers.

The department ordered the intermediate sized Fords, police said, in an attempt to economize and save on fuel costs.

The interior seats are white, not black as in the other cruisers, which will reflect heat during the summer. The white interior should cut air-conditioning costs, Ahlberg said.

The department also is considering buying compact cars, like the Chevrolet Nova, for detectives next year. No detectives cars were purchased this year.

The LTD II's, which have a V-8 engine, were built to the standard "police package" ordered by police departments to help the cars last longer during the wear and tear of city driving.

Amin's regime sees invaders in the wings

Nairobi, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin's government claimed Wednesday that U.S., British and Israeli mercenaries were advancing through Kenya to Uganda. The report was immediately rejected by Washington, London and Nairobi.

Uganda radio, monitored in this neighboring East African nation, said information that 2,500 mercenaries were marching towards Kampala came from a letter sent by an unidentified "group of Kenyan citizens" to the Ugandan Defense Council.

It was unclear whether the radio was broadcasting a new charge or returning to Amin's earlier claims that U.S., British and Israeli paratroopers were planning to support an invasion and coup attempt by exiled Ugandan President Milton Obote, who is living in Tanzania.

Amin said in another broadcast Wednesday there were 100 Americans in Uganda and some were there illegally. He repeated assurances that all Americans were free to leave but said those in Uganda illegally will be required to explain their presence to the ministry of internal affairs.

The American Embassy in Nairobi said there was no indication the Americans living and working in Uganda planned to leave. The State Department has estimated there were 240 U.S. citizens in Uganda, most of them missionaries and teachers.

An American tourist arrived in Nairobi from Uganda and said he was held without charge by military police who questioned him repeatedly and took him on unexplained rides. He said on one occasion he was awakened by "drunken soldiers wanting to beat up some prisoners."

"I was pretty sure I would be bumped off," said Brian Schwartz, a 24-year-old New York City lawyer who said he was picked up by military police last Saturday while having a beer in an African market.

Officials of the civil police indicated to him that any European in Kampala was likely to be picked up and that the police had no control over the military authorities, Schwartz said.

There were other tourists in detention with him in Kampala but Schwartz said as far as he knows they were not Americans. He refused to identify them for fear of "jeopardizing their safety."

Robert Shinn, a 25-year-old tourist from Spring Lake Heights, N.J., was the first American to leave since Amin lifted a travel ban for the U.S. citizens in Uganda. He said Tuesday after arriving here that "at no time did I feel any personal threat."

It's an insult

Minneapolis (AP) — Someone stole Joseph Pratt's wallet from a country club locker and when it came back in the mail, $50 that had been in it was gone.

As if that wasn't enough to make him feel bad, the postmen who found the empty wallet loose in the mails added their own special touch.

They charged him 50 cents postage due.

Northern Natural Gas to request rate hike

Omaha (UPI) — Northern Natural Gas Co. said Wednesday it planned to file a general rate increase request next month with the Federal Power Commission (FPC) and called on Congress to approve legislation to remove natural gas price regulation on new gas.

In its annual report, Northern cited costs of obtaining new gas supplies, together with increased operating and capital expenditures as the reasons for the pending rate hike request.

If approved, the increase would become effective in October.

Links pull it off; brace for Islanders

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Patience is a virtue Lincoln High has had to deal with 14 years. Now, the Links must deal with the next seven days with equal patience.

Fourteen years separated Lincoln High's last district basketball championship from Wednesday night's 55-49 triumph over Lincoln East in the A-1 finals at Pershing Auditorium.

Seven days separate the Links, the Cinderella entry in this year's boys state basketball tournament, from a shot at Grand Island, Nebraska's No. 1-ranked team.

That pairing developed Wednesday night. Grand Island will be accorded the No. 1 seed with a 20-1 record at the Nebraska School Activities Assn. pairings meeting Sunday morning in Lincoln.

The Links not only will be seeded eighth with an 11-10 record. They'll also be the Capital City's only entry. Southeast and Northeast saw chances for a wild card berth evaporate Wednesday night when Omaha Central upset Omaha North and Omaha Benson upset Papillion, giving the two losers the wild card bids.

"We've got to do our damndest to uphold the reputation of Lincoln basketball," Lincoln High coach Aldie Johnson said. "Coming out of this district, we feel we can win it. We're going to win it."

Characteristically, Johnson guards his optimism. But Wednesday night he allowed his emotions to hang out on the clothesline.

"It's been a long wait," he said. "There's been a lot of times when we've felt we were as good as anyone. We were capable, but we just didn't pull it off."

"It gets to a point where you feel a little snake-bitten. Naturally, the Lincoln High fans have gotten impatient. We've all gotten impatient."

The frustrated feeling finally ended as Lincoln High converted four free throws in the last 1:29 to pad a 51-49 lead.

Karl Scholz hit the front end of a one-and-one with 1:29 left. Ralph McWilliams added another with 35 seconds remaining and Dean Carstens iced it with two more free throws with 24 seconds left.

"I think (assistant) Joe Folsom summed it up best in the fourth quarter," Johnson said. "He told our players to suck it up and pretend like they were in a dogfight. That's exactly what this Lincoln district is."

In Johnson's analysis, Lincoln High won the first and fourth quarters and East won the second and third quarters.

"We jumped on them early (18-10)," he noted, "but they took the fight to us in the middle two quarters. We got them spread out enough to win the fourth quarter."

Lincoln High was able to accomplish that when East coach Paul Forch ordered a diamond-and-one defense in the second half with Dick Chancellor guarding Jerry Heckman.

Heckman had burned East for 18 of his game high 21 points in the first half, including a 12-point salvo in the second quarter. He attempted only one field goal in the second half, but finished with a game high 12 rebounds.

"Jerry did a great job, but this was a total team effort," Johnson said. "This group has really concentrated on team play and that's what we'll need most in the state tournament."

Albers' attitude is inspirational

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

Kevin Albers didn't lead Lincoln High scoring Wednesday night. He never has.

After all, the senior had only started a handful of games all season for coach Aldie Johnson.

But ask Johnson who has given the most of himself to the Lincoln High cause and the veteran of 27 years of high school coaching wouldn't bat an eye in answering Kevin Albers.

"That young man has done an outstanding job for us," Johnson confided after Lincoln High had earned its first state tournament appearance since 1963 with a 55-49 thriller over Lincoln East at Pershing.

"Even when he hasn't been in there, he's been an inspiration to all of us."

"Attitude-wise, you could not ask for a better player than Kevin," Johnson added. "It (attitude) plays such an important role in athletics."

Albers' constant spirit-raising tactics throughout the season, while a starter or a substitute, haven't always come so easy as in the district finale.

"He admitted that keeping fired up when you really wish you were playing is a tough task."

"It's tough sitting on the bench when you know you're good enough to be out there playing," Albers said. "I know it's tough for Karl (Scholz) and Robbie (Robinson) because they were starting before. But we all contribute. We all know how much that bench means to us now."

"It's like coach Johnson told me at the beginning of the year," Albers added. "He said I'd get my chance to contribute. But that it would be tough to start because of all the talent we have. I had a couple of chances earlier in the season to show what I could do and blew them."

"After that, I was down for awhile," Albers admitted. "But I figured you can't be down when you hit the floor. You've got to be sky-high, otherwise the other guys will think who are you to be down?"

"We could have all got down this year with our lack of success, but the coach kept preaching to us all along that a few points here and a few points there and we'd be right with the rest of the teams," he added. "Now we are. The big thing is, now we're all for one and one for all. We play as a unit."

Albers attitude has been catching according to Johnson.

"He never did get down on himself," Johnson said. "He kept coming out and practicing hard, even after he had some trouble early in the season. I'd look up on the bench and see his enthusiasm and think, geez, he's sincere. He gives 110 per cent at all times."

Albers likes to think of the entire teams giving that 110 per cent at all times.

"We can take the Islanders now," he said referring to Lincoln High's first round state tournament game against No. 1 Grand Island. "We're really started to click."

"We talked about the wild card a little before the game," Albers said of Southeast and Northeast's chances of making the field if Omaha North and Papillion hadn't lost their finals. "We just figured if those two teams got beat, we think we're good enough to represent the City of Lincoln at state."

"If East had won," he added, "We'd have backed them all the way. That's just the way it is."

Seward trims Central City

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

York — Rod Felix, heretofore known as Coach Felix around Seward, might have earned himself a new title here Wednesday night — Secretary of Defense.

After a nine year absence from the state tournament, Felix will have his Bluejays back in next week's basketball carnival in Lincoln thanks to a hustling, relentless defensive effort which stunned Central City, 55-32, in the B-5 district championship.

Not even the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines would expect a better defensive effort out of their boys than Felix got out of his troops before a crowd of more than 1800 fans.

Switching defensive tactics the entire contest from zone to man-to-man and utilizing a press, Seward came up with some amazing statistics to grab one of the precious eight spots in the state tourney field.

Probably the most startling statistic, is the fact the Bluejays held Central City to nine field goals the entire game. That's right — nine shots for the evening.

Central City, which aided Seward's cause, by not being able to throw a basketball in the ocean let alone a goal 10 feet off the floor, hit one field goal the first quarter, three in the second and fourth periods and two in the third stanza.

"Never did I dream it would be like this," Felix said of the ease his club attained its 19th win of the year against just two defeats.

Neither did anyone else in attendance. Everyone expected a skintight replay of the two team's earlier meeting, when Central City nipped the Jays, 48-47, to tie Seward for a share of the Central 10 Conference championship.

"Heavens no, I've never seen anything like it," Central City coach Jerry Rainforth said of his team's failure to score. "We had our shots, but we didn't play with much poise. And then things started to snowball and that was it."

Rainforth had every reason to believe his team would come out smoking after the Bison had streaked to a 90-58 victory over Schuyler Monday night in the semifinals.

"We peaked one game too early," Rainforth said. "But give Seward credit. They are a super club. They play defense well and have the big men inside who intimidate you."

The big men are twin brothers Jerry and Tom Bosak who stand 6-4 and 6-5 respectively. While Jerry was plagued with foul trouble, Tom was a stallion on defense for the Bluejays, blocking five shots and shutting down Central City leading scorer, Rick Johnson.

The Bosak's were not the only brothers getting into the act for Seward. Felix's sons, senior guard Marc and junior forward Mike combined for 30 points, with most of their shots coming from long range.

"I think Tom was really fired up tonight," Felix said of his younger son who led all scorers with 18 points while brother Marc tossed in 14 tallies. "He doesn't have a lot of finesse, but he gets his job done."

Seward jumped to a 12-4 first quarter advantage when Central City could not score the final 5-42 of the period. The Bison then went 4-58 of the second quarter before scoring another field goal as Seward raced to a 26-16 halftime advantage.

Central City, which hit 15 free throws to save itself from total embarrassment, continued to have its woes in the third quarter. After scoring a field goal at the 7:06 mark, the Bison's next bucket did not come until Dan Campbell's 20-footer with 33 seconds remaining in the period.

"We thought they would have all the momentum coming in here after their win Monday," Felix said of Bison, who ended the year with a 14-6 record.

After his team stumbled to a 42-41 win over Columbus Scotus in the Semifinals Monday, Felix admitted he was worried about the championship contest and considered some changes.

"But we decided to stick with the same defenses that carried us all year," the 12-year veteran Seward coach said. "I'm very happy for our seniors. They worked hard all year for this and they have seen that work pays off."

Hastings gets District 11 title

By Ken Hamblison
State College Writer

Hastings — Half a delay game that caused three straight Kearney turnovers and eight of nine missed field goals helped Hastings College grab a 92-66 win over the Antelopes and gain the NAIA District 11 title in the best of three series finale Wednesday Night at Kiewit Gym before some 2,400 fans.

Hastings, now 25-4, took the lead at 15-16 in the first half and led until Kearney's Loren Killion hit both ends of a one and one free throw situation and put in two more technical free throws to put the Antelopes ahead, 79-76, with 7:07 left to play.

Then Kearney put in a "semi-delay" game and suffered three straight turnovers, including an offensive foul on Killion, while Hastings guards Doug Sweeney and Doug Wolf chipped in five unanswered points to help the Broncos regain the lead, 81-79, with 4:05 remaining.

After three missed shots Kearney's Tim Mohama hit a hook shot to tie the score but Hastings' center Paul Bergman put the Broncos back in the lead with a basket and a free throw as Killion picked up his fourth personal foul with 2:18 left.

Tom Ritzdorf hit two free throws to pull Kearney within one, at 83-84. But the Antelopes missed on their next five field goal attempts, while Wolf hit a layup and Sweeney hit two more free throws as Killion fouled out of the game with 41 seconds remaining and the Broncos in the lead, 90-87.

Randy Cipriano, who hit seven of 12 field goals, finally broke the Kearney scoring drought with a basket at :31, but Hastings senior Kert McKee hit two more free throws with :29 seconds left and the Antelopes failed on their final shot, giving the Broncos a trip to the NAIA tournament in Kansas City.

Fonner to open; Black Brandy faces test

By Mark Gordon
Staff Sports Writer

Grand Island — Can Black Brandy regain her early 3-year-old credentials?

That's the major question surrounding Thursday's $6,000 Inaugural Handicap here at Fonner Park as the Third City plant opens its 40-day horse racing campaign.

Nine 3-year-old fillies have been entered for the 4-furlong dash which highlights a nine-race program at remodeled Fonner Park.

Assigned co-top weight of 118 pounds by racing secretary Dean Williams, Black Brandy had an outstanding record last season.

The Williams and Glen Fudge speedster was undefeated in three starts here last season, topping her GI appearances by defeating Bob 'a Zip by 4 1/4-lengths in the second division of the Fonner Park Juvenile Stakes.

After one start at Ak-Sar-Bon in Omaha, her juvenile season ended with injuries. She is making her first start since June 11.

Set to provide stiff opposition will be the Kennel Brothers' Bit O' Iowa, who will also carry 118 pounds.

Bit O' Iowa finished second in her first start then tallied three straight victories. She completed her 3-year-old campaign in September with a record of four wins, three seconds and one third in 10 outings.

With a win in the Fonner Expectation Stakes, she earned more than $17,000 last season.

Black Brandy will be ridden by John Rettele while Rob Williams will guide Bit O' Iowa.

Completing the field will be Kenneth Fleischer's Jennie Green (114); William Morris' Blind Choice (113); J. E. Kotter's Lady Willpower (110); John Truscott's Ladyrags Lick (109); Bolark Stables' A Place (108); A. E. Johnson's Lima (108) and Lytle Jess' Jolly Lady (108).

Racing will be held Thursday through Saturday this week and next week. Wednesday through Saturday racing is set for March 16-19 with Tuesday through Saturday racing set for March 22 through closing day April 30.

Post times will be 2 p.m. the first three weeks. Starting March 22, post times will be 3 p.m. weekdays and 2 p.m. on Saturdays.

There will be nine races daily. A $2 daily double will be held on the first two races and $3 exacta wagering will be offered on the fourth, sixth and ninth races.

Graded entries

The Lincoln newspapers will again carry complete graded entries for each Fonner racing program with probable odds, post positions, jockeys, weights and comments.

The Lincoln newspapers will be the only Nebraska papers with Fonner graded entries. Complete results will be in each edition. Today's graded entries are on Page 24.

Radio racing

Lincoln radio stations KLIN and KECK will provide coverage of the Fonner Park races.

KLIN will have scratches on each racing day at 8:15 a.m. and 9:15 a.m., daily double results at 5:15 p.m. on weekdays and 3:15 p.m. on Saturdays and complete results at 8:15 p.m. on weekdays and 6:15 p.m. on Saturdays.

KECK will have predictions at 12:40 p.m. weekdays and 12:20 p.m. on Saturdays, daily double results will be 5:15 p.m. weekdays and 3:15 p.m. Saturdays and complete results will be on KHAT-FM (KECK's FM affiliate) at 8 p.m.

lead on Killion's free throws, we went into a semi-delay game, where we took some chances we wouldn't have if we were in a full delay game," said Kearney coach Jerry Hueser.

"We did make some mistakes but I thought the offensive foul on Killion really turned the game around giving Hastings the ball when I thought we should have had a one-and-one free throw," said Hueser.

Hastings got 48 points from guards Sweeney, who had 31, Wolf and freshman Don Trotter who combined for 18 points.

Hastings, leading by three points with 5:58 remaining in the first half stretched the lead to 47-39 with 3:06 left as guards Trotter and Sweeney combined for 12 points during the three minute burst.

Trailing 54-45 at the half, Kearney roared back as Killion connected on five straight bombs to close the score to 56-55. The two teams played evenly until with 7:07 left Killion was fouled and Hastings coach Farrell was hit with a technical giving the 6-7 Antelope four free throw opportunities.

Killion finished with 34 points to boost his three-game total to 88 and left his four-year career scoring mark to 2097.

"These were key turnovers that we couldn't afford," lamented Humboldt-mentor Brad Uhrmacher. "We brought the ball down five times without getting one bucket and that really hurt."

Doug Barth, 6-3 senior, had 14 for Centennial's best scoring effort.

PLAGIARISM

Nebraska canoeing is covered

NEBRASKAland Magazine, in its typical Class A fashion, has another winner. Its March issue unfolds canoeing on Nebraska waters like it's never been seen before.

The Missouri, Elkhorn, Cedar, Calamus, Big Blue, Niobrara, Republican, Platte and Dismal rivers are charted by the commission staff.

Photos of streams are numerous points of interest are charted on overhead maps throughout the special liftout section. It's a must for the serious canoeer looking for new Nebraska waters to try.

Also of note for Nebraskans is Al Lindner's special issue of the "In Fisherman" now out. The issue covers reservoir fishing and has a good section on fishing such lakes as Lake McConaughy in our state.

At even has several photos of Nebraska anglers with good catches, including yours truly with a couple of fine walleye which became fouled up on my hook.

Reservoir fishing is becoming a science and the Lindner special points out some of the best kept secrets from some of the best known pros for walleye, largemouth bass, stripers, smallmouth and just about any other top game fish.

Dry weather effects

Low water, dry weather, it all has its effects. Most people take note of the immediate problems with fish kills being reported from farm ponds, streams and small lakes around the state.

Fish kills are common on small bodies of water during winter months. What happens generally is a pond freezes over and a layer of snow blankets the ice. The snow shuts out the sunlight which keeps aquatic plants alive.

As the plants die and decay, they use up oxygen in the water and if enough is used, the fish will suffocate under the ice and snow.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint

With extremely low water, such as many of our streams, ponds and lakes have suffered through this past year, winter kills have been common with fish.

But the drought is also hard on other living things during winter months. Without a good drink of water last fall, many of our annual plants and trees are suffering from a severely cold winter. Spring rains might be able to pull some of the borderline cases out of trouble, but extremely low soil moisture needs that rain badly, as farmers are well aware.

Dogs off and runnin'

The spring dog trail season is also upon us. Many hunting dog clubs are getting into their season of field trials at the various trial sites around the state.

One of the most popular and best in the nation is the Branched Oak Lake dog trial area. Mead's National Guard grounds east of Wahoo are also popular as is the trial area at Wagon Train Lake east of Hickman.

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission okays trial permits at the various public sites and can be contacted for specific dates or for trial information on certain dog species.

Our own Sunday outdoor page carries an outdoor calendar with many of the dog trial dates included.

Chuck Sinclair's state girls tourney selections

Class A
10 a.m. — Omaha Burke (18-2) vs Bellevue (13-6) — The Metro holiday and conference champions aren't about to quit in the first round.
2 p.m. — Omaha Central (14-6) vs Omaha Marian (19-3) — Central holds a holiday tournament win over the Crusaders, all the more reason to look for a Marian win despite Central's impressive 14 wins in its last 15 games.
5 p.m. — Kearney (12-5) vs Lincoln High (14-3) — There's little doubt which team has played the toughest competition throughout the year. Score a semifinal appearance for the wild card entry Links.
9 p.m. — Lincoln East (17-0) — vs. Grand Island (9-7) — The Islanders made the mistake of throwing a scare into East the first time the two teams met. A team like East doesn't forget those things easily. Look for an all Lincoln semifinal game.

Class B
Noon — Lexington (17-0) vs Crete (11-6) — No. 1 rated and unbeaten Minutemaid have too much scoring and rebounding balance for surprising Crete.
2 p.m. — Loup City (16-2) vs Alliance (16-3) — Two unranked teams clash but Loup City, a strong winner in an extremely tough district, should prevail with Class B leading scorer Connie Kulwicki.
7 p.m. — Lincoln Plus X (14-5) vs Wisner Pilger (16-1) — In rolling to a 16-1 regular season record, Wisner Pilger really hasn't been tested much. Plus should provide that testing with the Thunder bolts holding the edge of experience.
9 p.m. — Omaha Mercy (14-4) vs York (17-2) — One of the best matchups in Class B, York holds the slight edge in inside strength.

Class C
10 a.m. — Spencer (12-2) vs Valley (18-1) — A flip of the coin gives the nod to Valley. Spencer has had to rely too much on center Jan Krotter for everything.
Noon — Republican Valley (16-1) vs Cedar Rapids (17-1) — Cedar Rapids coach Doug Ackles has his squad primed for the state tourney appearance.
5 p.m. — Centennial (12-6) vs Hastings St. Cecilia (18-0) — The Hawks haven't even had a scare this season. They're bound to get one somewhere along the state tournament route, but the opener isn't the place.
7 p.m. — Pleasanton (19-0) vs West Point (11-6) — No. 2 rated all season long, Pleasanton should roll into the semifinals over West Point.

Class D
Noon — Gurley (14-1) vs Butte (15-3) — Valerie Schumacher should be too much for Butte to handle.
2 p.m. — Cambridge (12-3) vs Shickley (16-0) — No. 1 rated Longhorns haven't remained that way to see it all in the first round of competition. Although Cambridge should provide a stiff hurdle to cross.
7 p.m. — Diller (15-3) vs Newcastle (17-1) — Look for an upset of sorts here with Diller and coach Larry Shoff providing the fireworks.
9 p.m. — Overton (14-3) vs Hordville (17-0) — Unbeaten Hordville wants a chance to prove it's better than the No. 6 rating in the Sunday Journal and Star.

NFL pact springs players free

The Lincoln Star

Thursday, 3/3/77 Page 27

New York (AP) — Some top National Football League players were on the market Wednesday, two months earlier than they thought they would be.

Under terms of the collective bargaining agreement signed by the players association and management, players who completed their option seasons in 1976 immediately were eligible to negotiate with any of the 28 NFL clubs.

Free to begin shopping for better situations were a number of familiar names. The list was top-heavy with Los Angeles and St. Louis players with seven from each team on the list. The Rams included wide receiver Harold Jackson, running back Cullen Bryant, guard Tom Mack and kicker Tom Dempsey. The Cardinals listed cornerback Norm Thompson, defensive end Bob Bell and linebacker Greg Hartle among their option-free players.

Also open to offers are defensive end Tommy Hart of San Francisco, a second team All-Pro last season tight end Charles Young of the Philadelphia Eagles, wide receiver Roy Jefferson and linebacker Harold McClinton of the Washington Redskins.

linebacker Tommy Nobis of Atlanta among others.

The initialing of the new contract by Sargent Karch, executive director of NFL Management Council, bargaining arm of the clubs, and Ed Garvey, head of the union, wiped out the old May 1 freedom date. In the future, players completing contractual obligations will be free to sign with new teams on Feb. 1.

The new agreement also erased the controversial Rozelle Rule which called for NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle to set compensation for clubs losing players through the option route.

Now the compensation is set according to a pre-determined formula. Clubs losing players will receive draft choices from the teams signing free agents. The choices will range from a single third round selection to two consecutive No. 1 choices, depending on the salary terms paid to the player by his new team.

It is ironic that Bryant is one of the option-free players. When the Rams signed free agent Ron Jessie after the wide receiver had played out his option at Detroit a couple of years ago, Rozelle ruled that Bryant should go to the Lions as compensation. But he neglected to ask the running back first and Bryant sued, winning his right to stay with the Rams. That was one of a number of court decisions that knocked the teeth out of the Rozelle Rule.

Still unclear was the compensation status of clubs which lost free agent players during the period when the Rozelle Rule was not in effect. Does Washington, for example, owe some payment to Dallas for tight end Jean Fugett and running back Calvin Hill or to the New York Jets for running back John Riggins? All signed as option-players before last season. Does Cleveland owe Miami some payment for wide receiver Paul Warfield? And do the Dolphins have something coming from the New York Giants for running back Larry Csonka?

And if the payoff is draft choices, will Washington get them? The Redskins traditionally deal off their picks in advance and probably would be hard-pressed to produce the high round selections required by the contract formula.

Bus driver is attacked by girl with pool cue

Omaha (AP) — Police said a bus driver was attacked by a pool cue-wielding high school girl Tuesday after one of her friends had been arrested on the bus for suspicion of marijuana.

The driver, 47-year-old John McCoubrey, was not seriously injured. He completed his work with the Metropolitan Area Transit and then sought hospital treatment, being released after it.

The incident began when two narcotics detectives identified themselves to a group of teenagers on the bus and told two boys they were under arrest. Police said the boys resisted arrest by swinging at the officers and one of them escaped.

The other, aged 17, was booked by police on suspicion of possession of marijuana.

The driver continued his route, police said, with the youth's companions still on the bus. They said a girl walked to the front of the bus, accused him of calling the police and reporting marijuana smoking on the bus and then began hitting him with a pool cue.

A MAT spokesman said the driver succeeded in getting the girl and her companions off the bus without striking back.
